Watch your teeth—

Do you know that four persons out of every five past forty, according to irrefutable dental statistics, and many thousands younger, are afflicted with Pyorrhea?

Has Nature warned you, with tender, bleeding gums, of Pyorrhea's presence or coming?

Don't delay. Let your dentist inspect your teeth and gums regularly. Brush your teeth, twice daily, with Forhan's For the Gums.

Forhan's For the Gums, used in time and used consistently, will prevent Pyorrhea or check its progress. In addition, it keeps the teeth white, the gums firm and the mouth healthy.

Truly, grumbl'd the Squire in high dudgeon, the country is going to the dogs. Christmas, markye, and not two inches of snow! But what d'ye expect, with the Whigs in power?

MANY Christmases and many Governments have come and gone since the morning when James Shoolbred threw open the doors of his shop to 1822's Tottenham Court Road . . . . To-day, the great house that is Shoolbreds looks out, a youthful centenarian, on a London whose face has changed even as its winters. . . . But the old-time spirit of good-will is still there. You will find it, more genial than ever, in the Shoolbred departments, each one crammed with Christmas cheer.

HANDBAGS which you can fill o'erbrimming with Christmas wishes. A delightful variety to choose from. A Silk Bag on an imitation old ivory frame, lined with silk. Size 6 by 6¾ inches, costs 19/6

A very Artistic Bag of hand-tooled leather, leather-lined, 7 by 6 inches, costs 42/-

Larger cases, to hold notes and other things too, are priced, with silver-gilt mounts, from 17/6 to 35/-

RINGS. Whether you wish to spend £9 on a little ring set with a diamond and brilliants, or to be extravagant with £50 on a 5-stone diamond ring, you can count on finding something charming at Shoolbreds.

BOOKS: Only a few lines here to say that we have a whole section overflowing with books for children and 'grown-ups' of all ages. You should see them!

Bring the Kiddies to TOYLAND!

Let them revel in this wonderful land of Dreams-come-True, filled with all the things that children hold dear. They can have tea in a special little Restaurant that we call "Children's Corner." For yourself, there is the main Restaurant, newly decorated and very pleasant.

BACCY POUCHES. Whether he smokes "Arcadia" with a capital "A" or shag with a small "s," he probably needs a new pouch. The "tuck-in" kind in buckskin, 7/9 and 6/9. The flap-over variety, in gold-mounted buckskin 18/6

A NEW DISCOVERY

Every Well-Groomed Woman Needs

Hair-growth on the face is most disfiguring and makes even a pretty face ugly. Likewise nothing is quite so objectionable as a growth of hair on the arms, under the arms, or visible through the fine cobweb mesh of thin silk stockings. Until the discovery of Veet Cream, women have used scraping razor blades and evil-smelling, irritating chemicals to remove unwanted hair. A razor only stimulates hair growth just as trimming a hedge makes it grow faster and thicker. The burning Barium Sulphide used in chemical preparations causes red blotches, painful irritations, soreness and skin blemishes. The new Veet Cream does not contain any Barium Sulphide or other poisonous chemicals. Whereas razors and ordinary depilatories merely remove the hair above the skin surface, Veet melts the hair away beneath it. It has no offensive odour and is as easy to use as a face cream. You simply spread Veet on just as it comes from the tube, wait a few minutes, rinse it off, and the hair is gone as if by magic. Satisfactory results guaranteed in every case or money is returned. Veet may be obtained for 3/6d. from all chemists, hairdressers and stores; also sent post paid in plain wrapper for 4/- (Trial size by post for 6d. in stamps.)

Ease of Mind

Perfect ease of mind — that delectable condition pictured by poets — fabled by philosophers in Arcadian or Utopian dreams — is difficult to attain. Man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upwards, nor is woman entirely exempt from worry. The best we can do is to offer contentment in instalments, and by all means let us begin with the feet. Lotus and Delta shoes are made by contented people for contented people. They carry the secret of contentment in their well cut lines, admirable fit and strong yet supple leathers. Small part though it be that they have to play in the drama of costume, they yet give to a woman an invincible feeling of being well dressed. It is the ground plan of a mind at ease.

OMO

BLEACHER-CLEANSER-PURIFIER.

MANY British homes watch for these instructions on how to fold a serviette. More and more homes every day discover the right way to make serviettes flawlessly white by using OMO.

OMO is simple to use, is economical, and has no harmful result whatever on white linens and cottons. It will help to make your table as attractive and inviting as you and your guests love to see it.

NOT FOR COLOURS, WOOLLENS OR FLANNELS.

Mix the OMO in a small basin with sufficient cold water to make a thin cream, using one tablespoonful of OMO for every gallon of water.

Pour contents of basin into cold water in the copper and stir until all the OMO is completely dissolved. Then put in the clothes and bring slowly to the boil, following complete directions on packet.

THE "VERY" BRUSH for the HAIR

EVERY BRISTLE—
IN EVERY TUFT—
PLAYS ITS PART

Bristles are the most important feature in a hair brush, and are an expensive item in its construction. But best bristles must be utilised to the best advantage when in the tufts of the brush—otherwise they are useless.

—it's a HINDES

In most brushes only a few of the bristles—those that stand fractionally higher than the others—perform any real function in brushing the hair. The other bristles form a dense mass that skim over the hair instead of penetrating it right down to the scalp. In every bristle in every tuft plays a part in brushing the hair, the bristle tufts oscillating in unison with the gentle yielding rubber air-cushion in which the tufts are set. There is no tugging—no pulling—no breaking the hair. It is the gentle, pleasing penetration that makes HINDES "VERY" BRUSH just the very brush.

These brushes are obtainable at 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d., 15s., 18s. 6d. each from the leading Stores, Hairdressers and Chemists throughout the Country, or direct, post free, from Hindes Limited, Patentees and Manufacturers of Hindes Hair Wavers and articles de luxe for the dressing-table, 1, Tabernacle Street, E.C.

WISDOM

With much knitting of brows and repeated gnawings at pencil ends, young people strive painfully to acquire wisdom from books.

The process can be carried to excess. Care of the mind must be balanced by care of the body; and in matters hygienic good soap plays an indispensable rôle. There is something more precious than wisdom to be acquired from good soap and a tub of steaming water—the exhilaration of a glowing skin and the sense of well-being that is the right of every youngster.

UNDER ROYAL PATRONAGE.

CHRISTMAS will, I fear, be a very sad one for many people in many countries. Let us lay aside our own burdens and try and lighten those of others. Christ came at Christmas to give us peace and joy, let us who follow Him try and be joy-bringers to all we can. Without our aid He cannot work. We must be workers together with Him, not hinderers.

First, I appeal to all who can give to do so. We want Christmas gifts for 300 Ladies, and coal for as many. What would Christmas be without a bright fire? Then we want every Lady to hear the postman knock at her own door, not only at her neighbour's. "Here is a letter for me, and here is a parcel; someone has remembered me," and the tired face is brightened, and Christmas joy is hers. Yes, please, all sorts of gifts, useful and unexpected, such as handkerchiefs and interesting books. I will send names and addresses of those who would be glad of presents in kind, but do not forget the money we need, I beg of you, and then we shall be able to make very many sad and lonely ones happy for one day in the year.

Amundsen and Wolsey!

The following letter from Siberia, dated July, 1919, has just arrived:—

HOW can I ever thank you enough for the excellent Underwear you sent me. After a year's experience under the most trying conditions on my present voyage I have found Wolsey far superior to any other product of the kind.

(Signed) Roald Amundsen.

This letter is none the less interesting for having been nearly 4½ years in coming. All the members of the Expedition bringing the post perished, the letter being ultimately found by a Russian party and sent on, via Captain Amundsen's brother, to us.

Captain Helmer Hanssen, a member of Captain Amundsen's Expedition, who has spent seven winters in Arctic and Antarctic Exploration also writes that "Wolsey is the best Underwear ever used in these regions."

Surely the Underwear that has proved its worth in this fashion amid the rigours of the Arctic Circle needs little further recommendation to our countrymen and women here at home.

Wolsey-de-Luxe, Wolsey Fashioned, and Wolsey Hardwear are three specially recommended qualities; all carrying the Wolsey Guarantee of free replacement if they shrink. But be sure to see the Trade Mark.

HOW I KILLED MY SUPERFLUOUS HAIR ROOT AND ALL.

Hindoo Secret Banished it so it Never Returned after Electricity and Many Depilatories Had Failed

LET ME SEND YOU MY FREE HELP

Until nearly middle-age I was sorely troubled by hideous Superfluous Hairs. My face was a sight, with a heavy moustache on my lip and a tough beard on my chin. My arms also were heavily covered. I tried one thing after another without success. The electric needle only made the growth worse. Finally my husband, a noted Surgeon and an Officer in the British Army, secured from a Native Hindoo Soldier (whose life he saved) the closely guarded secret of the Hindoo religion, which forbids Hindoo women to have the slightest trace of hair except on their head. I used it; and in a few days my hair-growths had entirely disappeared. To-day not a trace of it can be found. It has been killed for ever, root and all. I will send Free and without obligation to anyone full information, so that you can follow my example and completely destroy all trace without having to resort to the dangerous electric needle. So stop wasting your money on worthless depilatory preparations, and sign and send the Coupon below, or copy of it, with your name and address to-day, stating whether Mrs. or Miss. All I ask is that you send me three penny stamps to cover my outlay for posting. Address as below:

Don't be neglected on account of your superfluous hair. Banish it.

THIS FREE COUPON or copy of same to be sent with your name and address and 3d. stamps.

MRS. HUDSON: Please send me free full information and instructions to cure superfluous hair. Address, FREDERICA HUDSON, Suite 58C, No. 9, Old Cavendish Street, London, W.1.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Mrs. Hudson belongs to a family high in Society, and is the widow of a prominent Army Officer, so you can write her with every confidence. Address as above

BABERS method of Fitting the Foot
with SHOES and BOOTS

BABERS are Foot-Fitters before they are Shoe-Sellers. Their service is based upon the theory that the usual heel-to-toe method of measuring a foot is fundamentally wrong. Put very briefly, the Baber method necessitates the measuring of the foot from heel to ball, and the fitting of shoes (or boots) which fit all that part of the foot closely, thus giving support where support is needed, particularly under and at the side of the arch, whilst the toes and toe joints are allowed complete freedom of movement (see diagram).

To enable this accurate fitting of the foot to be achieved, it has been necessary to stock shoes in as many as eight widths to each size and half size, instead of the usual two or three widths. The complete comfort of Baber-fitted shoes is astonishing, especially to those who have suffered in any way from foot trouble. The vital difference between shoes fitted correctly on the Baber method and shoes fitted, or rather misfitted, by the ordinary method can readily be proved by your feelings of foot comfort when Baber-fitted, and also by the evidence of your own eyes by means of the special X-Ray machine at Babers.

Babers are renowned for the smartness of their styles. At the recent Women's Exhibition they gave the first Shoe Fashion Parade ever held in this country.

Whether actually suffering from foot trouble or not, you owe it to yourself to wear correctly fitting shoes. And don't forget the vital importance of seeing that your children also wear only correctly fitting shoes and boots. Booklet "O," fully explaining the Baber method, will gladly be sent post free upon request.

THE NEW "CORSLO"
THE CORRECT GARMENT FOR WEARING WITH RIDING HABITS

To achieve the most fashionable figure effect of absolutely natural suppleness is the aim of the new "Corslo." Only two central and short bones are introduced into the cleverly cut Crepe de Chine, Tricot or Satin, and it does the combined duty of bodice, corset and hip belt, moulding and at the same time supporting the bust, and giving a long graceful line to the waist and hips, and kept in position by two sets of suspenders. First and foremost the "Corslo" is for the slender woman's wear with the most fashionable day and evening gowns and dance dresses, and as absolute freedom for every movement is essential for the enjoyment of tennis and golf, etc., it is a necessity and boon to the sportswoman; incidentally it should be included in every Trousseau and Tropical Outfit.

THE NEW "CORSLO" HIP BELT AND BUST BODICE COMBINED (as sketch), in Pink or White Cotton Tricot, buttoned at back, two bones in front which may be removed for washing, two pairs of suspenders. Measurements required when ordering: hips, bust and waist.

The 'Duo Art

For those who know, and those who have yet to know, the beauty of Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata.

The Story of a Wintry Night One Hundred Years ago.

COLD brilliant moonlight silvered the snowy roofs of quaint old Bonn. Through a narrow street the master was walking with a friend. "Hush!" he exclaimed, halting suddenly in front of a little house. "Listen! That is my Sonata in F. How well it is played!"

In the midst of the finale the music ceased abruptly and a voice cried sadly, "If only I might hear it played by the master."

"Let us go in," said Beethoven.

The Master Enters.

He opened the door. There at the table sat a man mending shoes. The girl, his blind sister, had bowed her head upon the old piano.

"Pardon me," said Beethoven, "perhaps if you allow me, I can fulfill your wish."

She gave Beethoven her place at the piano. Under his touch the worn strings sang as if born anew, and out of the old instrument trooped hosts of his compelling melodies to surround and captivate the wondering pair. The flame of one candle sputtered fitfully and presently went out. The youth slipped over and threw open the shutters. As the moonlight flooded the room, the pianist paused.

"Who and what are you?" gasped the cobbler.

"Listen," answered the master, and he played the first few bars of his Sonata in F.

"Beethoven," burst from the lips of the pair, "Oh, play on, play on — just a little more!" they pleaded as he arose to go.

The Masterpiece is Created.

For a moment he stood looking out of the window. And then again seating himself, he began as if to voice the spirit of the calm, perfect night. There, in that little room, he sounded the very depths of the sublime.

That was one hundred years ago, and long since the "Moonlight Sonata" has become deep-rooted in the garden of the human heart.

Beethoven, the master, can no longer come to us in person. He left, however, his wonderful masterpieces of music, which are the priceless heritage of mankind. And the great living interpreters, Bauer, Busoni, Cortot, de Pachmann, Friedman, Gabrilowitsch, Grainger, Hofmann, Paderewski, and scores more are waiting to come to you, through authentic "DUO ART" records of their playing, with the musical treasures of the ages.

A REPRODUCING PIANO. By means of special music rolls, made by pianists while playing, it reproduces their actual performances with absolute fidelity. Every subtle shade of tone and tempo, every pedal effect is reproduced.

BYSTANDER COMMENTS

ALL THE WORLD'S A STAGE

This is So Sudden

THE great day is at hand at last. All those great political lovers who have wooed their constituencies during the past three weeks are definitely to "pop the question," and, unless I am much mistaken, the answer in each and every instance will be: "Oh, George! This is so sudden!"

He Didn't Know

FOR it has been a whirlwind wooing. There has been no time to proceed along the conventional lines—flowers, chocolates, and sixpence for the little brother. By such niceties, the rough way to the parental doorstep may be made smooth, but the wretched suitor has had to brace up his courage and go in suddenly off the deep end. And, in nine cases out of ten, when the girl's father asked him bluntly what were his prospects, he had to reply that he didn't know.

Tweedledum and Tweedledee

I'M not at all sure that a short and sharp election doesn't secure the best results in the end. After all, these politicians can't tell us much that we don't know already. They lead us round in circles, until we are back where we started, and, with the old rhymester, we find ourselves remarking:

> Strange all this difference should be > 'Twixt Tweedledum and Tweedledee!

Sackcloth and Ashes

WHEN you have done a certain amount of electioneering, you begin to wonder if the differences between the constitutional parties really do matter a row of pins. There are drawbacks to the most magnificent statutes, while obvious political iniquities may carry unexpected blessings in their train. It is just possible that Free Trade may not win the country. There may even be something to be said for Protection. And so, even though the result of Thursday's conflict isn't just what you had hoped, don't take your sackcloth out of the camphor cupboard. Leave your ashes where they rightly belong—in the dustbin!

Lawyers and Little Boys

ONE truth has really emerged from the political dust-up. The popularity of the Election is on the wane, just as the popularity of War is in similar case. They are luxuries that we cannot afford. The only people who really revel in elections are lawyers and little boys. Members of the general public are aware that War is really Ruin camouflaged by bugles and bunting. The trading community have had a nasty shock during the past two weeks. Every theatre in London dropped at least £300 on their weekly receipts and the restaurants were empty.

Exit the Eggs

SUCH has been the general depression, that we haven't even had the heart to throw eggs at one another. I am aware that the comic papers will find it hard to believe this. The political egg, which ranks below the newly-laid egg, the really fresh egg, the fresh egg, and the cooking egg, has been the stock-in-trade of the comic paper since the days of Perkin Warbeck and John Wilkes, for, like the soul of John Brown, it still goes marching on. But I didn't hear of one being thrown in this election.

Those Loud Speakers

THE introduction of the "loud speaker" into the political fray has made the politician's path much less thorny than of yore. If he is a retiring soul who does not shine in the matter of back-answers, he takes a very small hall, which he is careful to pack with his personal friends and supporters. And, as his sisters and his cousins and his aunts are hanging upon his every word, the loud speakers will be carrying the glad tidings into the cold and unsympathetic street where lurk those bad men who hold opposite views and would like to let him know it. It must be very difficult to heckle a loud speaker!

A New Party

TAKING my courage in both hands, I am going to branch out in business as a prophet. I am going to prophesy that certain political labels have been used for the last time. Already the name of the new party is creeping into print. When you find a Conservative paper saying "A Liberal is fighting the Constitutional battle here," it gives you furiously to think. And why not a Constitutional Party, embracing all those who have a lingering belief in the future of Great Britain and her Empire—simple folk like you and me, for instance?

WHO'LL "GET THE BIRD"? By Charles Grave

My Own Paper

I WAS thrilled to the core when I read that Mr. Churchill and his fellow Liberals in Leicester had decided to bring out their own paper, "as they are receiving no support from any section of the local Press." What wonderful possibilities are opened up by this splendid enterprise. Any one failing to find appreciation in the daily papers has the remedy ready to his hand. The actor whose work is adversely criticised, the professional boxer who is slated for getting knocked out before the kinema operators have got the ring properly in focus, and other unfortunates—all may take heart of grace and start daily papers of their very own.

Some Examples

THUS, we should have the Cochran Clarion and the Beckett Bugle added to the already heavily laden bookstalls of Mr. Smith. And why stop there? Why shouldn't there be an Inman Independent? The Donoghue Despatch would make a timely appearance at the end of the flat-racing season, and Viscount Curzon might issue a special edition of his own paper each time he is summoned for driving furiously.

Christmas is A-Coming

ARRANGEMENTS for the Christmas entertainments are in a very advanced state. The veteran Fred Bowyer, who wrote most of the songs that our grandfathers sang, bobs up again with The Windmill Man—no connection with the publishing house of Heinemann, bien entendu, and Gerald du Maurier is taking a holiday in order that The Rose and the Ring may have a London hearing at Wyndham's Theatre. From Liverpool, I hear great reports of this Thackeray adaptation for which Harris Deans is responsible.

Advance Bookings

SOME of the existing plays will easily hold their own as Christmas attractions. Good Luck at Drury Lane, with its landescapes and seaescapes is better than any pantomime, and the youngsters will shriek delight at the antics of Billy Leonard as a polar bear in the big Gaiety success, Catherine. While you are booking seats in advance—a necessary precaution—don't forget The Rising Generation at the Shaftesbury, which deals with the lurid adventures of six young people who tried to run a country house on their own account. A very merry play this!

The Traffic Problem

THE news of thousands of yellow taxi-cabs shortly to be buzzing about the streets of London, prompted someone to sympathise with the UndergrounD railway people, in that the increased competition would reduce fares and taxis would be within the reach of all. Myself, I believe it is a plot on the part of the UndergrounD to drive everybody — underground. Already, the streets are so congested that the slowest way to anywhere is by taxi. And another thousand or so won't improve matters.

One for Winston

"I AM not a politician" to quote Mrs. Winston Churchill, but I must say I admired the way she spoke up for her husband at a meeting last week. She smote the opposition—Labour in this instance—hip and thigh, and I don't doubt they liked her all the better for so doing. To see a wife sticking up for her man is one of the most grateful and comforting things in this weary, workaday world.

My Gallery

I HAVE often envied the Leverhulmes and the Beits of this world. Strange, perhaps, but true. I have always been jealous of their collection of old masters, their great galleries of pictures. Now I no longer envy them. I am starting a gallery of my own. The Graphic Christmas Number, which I can purchase for two shillings (unless the editor sends me a copy) contains some excellent reproductions of Reynolds, Greuze and Raeburn. I am going to frame them right now—if someone gives me frames for a Christmas present. And, lest I should altogether forget my days in a dug-out, I am going to put up Miss Helen McKie's charming fantasy, "Bal Masqué" and Mr. Lionel Edwards snow-scene.

WHO, WHEN & WHERE

BY THE BYSTANDER IN SOCIETY

Spain and the Vatican

IN the turmoil of our General Election the significance of an important happening in European history has been rather overlooked. The recent visit of the King and Queen of Spain to Italy is the first that has been paid to that country by Spanish Sovereigns for over fifty years.

Since 1870 the Vatican has refused to receive any Roman Catholic Sovereign staying with the King of Italy at the Quirinal. And since no Roman Catholic Sovereign could run the risk of such a refusal they have taken the only line possible—to stay away from Rome. Thus it is that the only Sovereigns received by the Popes since the Unification of Italy have been Protestants.

The present Pope has broken the rule. First he received the King and Queen of the Belgians, and now the King and Queen of Spain, the last a visit of enormous importance, for Spain has always been "the eldest daughter of the Church," and King Alfonso is "His Most Catholic Majesty." And the Spanish visit to Rome was under the ægis of Signor Mussolini and the Fascisti! It was a turning upside down of history, which sent twitters of amazement through Roman Society.

The Queen of Spain is the only woman in the world who can go to the Pope in national dress. Every other woman must wear black. Queen Victoria Eugenie went in white, many jewels and a white mantilla. And she was born a British Princess! I believe you would have to go back to the Middle Ages for a parallel.

There's a great deal of Spanish blood in Italy. In Naples and Sicily many of the oldest families are of Spanish origin, and in Tuscany the c before a vowel is still pronounced h, as in Spanish, a legacy of the time when the Tuscan Grand Dukes were Spaniards.

Coquetting with Nonsense

WHAT a lot of wearying nonsense one is condemned to listen to in these days! And what the nonsense will become before the elections are over is beyond imagination.

I'm one of those old-fashioned people who copy into a commonplace book any passages that strike me in books, or any good story I happen to hear in my goings up and down in the world. I believe it is hopelessly Victorian, but, like several other things in that despised period, it is most amusing. One isn't young for ever, and it is a pleasant experience to warm one's ageing hands at the fires of one's own youth just by turning the pages of a leather-bound manuscript book.

A recent entry—from Lady Glover's Memories of Four Continents—gives me the peg on which to hang the nonsense I have just spoken about, and the proof that it is nonsense.

Lady Glover says, "It is a melancholy fact in human nature that strict austerity of life, combined with intense concentration on religious ideas, unhinges the mind as effectually as indulgence in strong drink."

In my argument I'm afraid I must leave out "strict austerity of life," and for "intense concentration on religious ideas" I must substitute "intense concentration on the latest fad of the moment." But the substitution makes no difference to the effect—I refer you to the quotation.

It is amazing the number of intelligent, common-sense people—common-sense, that is, in all except this one point—who are coquetting with the suggestion of a capital levy.

A Theory

A BRILLIANT young man who hasn't fourpence, and who dines and lunches out on his scintillating conversation, has enunciated a theory as to capital levy which I find appeals very strongly to women, because at this moment they are obsessed by politics—the "intense concentration," mentioned by Lady Glover in another matter.

The brilliant young man's theory is this. The heavy income-tax is being used to pay the interest on our debt to America. If a capital levy were made equal to our debt to America we should all be relieved of income tax and be happy ever after! Now, the odd thing is the number of women who accept this theory as gospel and repeat it broadcast—even women with money.

Written on paper, or advanced with all the charm of a striking personality, the suggestion sounds alluring, but the ladies, who hang on this young man's words and spread them broadcast, overlook one all-important point. Those who possess any of the capital so much despised by Labour don't keep it in a stocking, or like their mediæval ancestors, in a treasure-chest triply bound in brass and iron. If they did they wouldn't have any income.

A capital levy would mean that everyone possessing capital would have to sell out investments. And here the young man's suggestion breaks off into two points. If everyone possessing capital had to sell out investments, who could buy? It would be a case of the famous island whose inhabitants lived by taking in each other's washing. And what would be the value of stocks and shares that nobody had the money to buy? The Stock Exchange would answer that question the instant Parliament passed any Act authorising a capital levy.

A Capital Levy Already

I'VE made an enemy for life—and on a matter of life and death! A lady—she's canvassing like billy-ho in a London constituency at this present moment—was holding forth on this matter and expounding the theory—just like a parrot—of a capital levy sweeping away the income tax. I ventured to suggest that we already had a capital levy. "That's nonsense," she said. "What would you call the death duties?" I asked her.

Pipon, M.V.O., Rear-Admiral Sir Hubert Brand, K.C.M.G., Flag-Com. C. A. H. Brooking, and Lieut.-Com. S. H. Edelsten

"They are death duties, not taxes on capital," was her answer. And this dame is canvassing!

I cited a case within my own knowledge, in which it has taken eight years to pay off the death duties, and that only by the most rigid economy, cutting down subscriptions, upkeep, etc. If the Treasury had insisted on the full payment at the death of the owner the whole property would have had to be sold, and a forced sale wouldn't have brought in the money for the duties.

I couldn't get her to see that a capital levy would have to be worked on precisely the same lines, and so she wouldn't be saved her income tax. She said I was a Die-Hard. I told her she ought to go and see how the capital levy has worked in Russia. So, there's a coldness between us. But if ever there is a capital levy I should be very interested to hear what this particular lady would say when she got the Government notice—it would sure to be on buff paper.

Frankly, there's an awful lot of harm being done by women talking this kind of nonsense.

The Order of Crusaders

I WAS deeply impressed by the commemoration service of the Order of Crusaders—about which I told you a little time ago—at Westminster Abbey last Wednesday. It seemed an answer to the vapourings and revolutionary theories which are flying about everywhere nowadays.

The Unknown Warrior is the first Knight of the Order. A wreath was laid upon his grave by the Pro-Grand Master of the Order, escorted by the Dean of Westminster and all the clergy of the Abbey in gorgeous vestments. A gift of gold was made by the Order for the adornment of St. Edward the Confessor's Chapel. The service, with its processions of clergy and the representatives of the Order in their robes, was mediæval both in spirit and pageantry, but it was a service symbolic of the vows of those who join the Order—loyalty, obedience, service and self-sacrifice.

The Abbey was crowded—a happy sign in these days when everybody seems bent on getting as much as they can out of their neighbour, instead of—as the Order of Crusaders teaches—doing all they can to help their neighbour.

The Duke of York attended the service, and, I hear, was greatly impressed.

Miss Ellen Terry's Portrait

MISS ELLEN TERRY has just been sitting to Mr. Cyril Roberts for her portrait in charcoal. The result is one of the most delightful impressions we have had of the great actress in her old age. Mr. Roberts has seized and put upon his paper the unquenchable youth that radiates from Miss Terry's eyes. Until I saw this portrait and another of the beautiful Lady Rachel Sturgis—which you will find reproduced in this issue—I never realised what a medium charcoal can be for the expression of personality and beauty. But the medium must be in the hands of a master of portraiture like Mr. Roberts.

"Scrapped" Ships and Mess-room Plate

SOME of you will remember—certainly a good many BYSTANDER readers in the Navy—that when the "County" cruisers were built, trophies and silver plate were presented to ships by the counties bearing their names.

The "County" type of war-vessel has, I understand, become obsolete, and "scrapping" has begun. What happens to the silver plate presented to the messes? The existence of a man-of-war of any class, we know, is not indefinite, but it would be interesting to know what happens to valuable mess-plate when one of His Majesty's ships passes into the hands of

An Interesting Partnership

GERTRUDE LADY DECIES has joined forces with Madame Desirée at 7, Hertford Street, Mayfair, and the result should be a very interesting partnership. Your Bystander doesn't pretend to any knowledge of garments feminine, except that he does know when a woman is well-dressed. And the mannequins who showed the dresses in Hertford Street last week were superlatively well-dressed. The new partnership goes in for the practical as well as the beautiful. A suit-case held business-like garments for the lady canvasser, and there were rugs and garments that suggested winter sports in Switzerland.

Three Brother-Peers

WE should have to go back a good way in history to find a parallel to three brothers all sitting in the House of Lords at one time. Now that Lord Robert Cecil has been raised to the peerage three brothers Cecil will be in the Lords, Lord Salisbury and Lord Robert, by virtue of their temporal rank, and Lord William Cecil, Bishop of Exeter, by virtue of his spiritual rank.

There could be no greater contrast between two brothers than between the Bishop of Exeter and the new peer. The Bishop is burly and bearded, with a distinct resemblance to his father, the late Lord Salisbury. Lord Robert is slender and ascetic-looking, with the stoop of the student and has the fine features of his mother's family, the Aldersons.

The Riviera Week by Week

THE first event of the season organised by the English colony in Cannes, was the diner-dansant at the Beau-Rivage Hotel in aid of Earl Haig's fund for ex-soldiers, and there can be no question as to its complete success. So many guests arrived that the famous jazz band from the Café de Paris at Monte Carlo, which had been specially engaged for the occasion, had to be installed in a passage leading into the ballroom. Mrs. W. J. Locke was the principal hostess, and she and her popular husband entertained a large party of friends. Others bringing parties included the Rajah and Ranee of Pudukota, Sir Francis and Lady Elliot, Maud, Lady Orr-Lewis, Admiral and Mrs. Bax, Major and Mrs. Henryson-Caird, Captain and Mrs. Wardrop, Admiral and Mrs. Crooke, Mr. and Mrs. E. Phillips Oppenheim, Chevalier and Madame Vecchiotti, Mr. and Mrs. James Corder, Dr. Ginner, Miss Cartier and Madame Goudine-Leskovitch.

AN unexpected interlude was provided by Madame Delagrange Jay, the American artist, who introduced her Brazilian monkey, Prince Carlo, well-known in many European countries among Royalties and notabilities as a Darwinian collector for charities. His collection-box realised over 600 francs, and the total amount of the fund, derived from the dance, the sale of poppies and special donations of 500 francs each from Mr. Phillips Oppenheim and Sir Mortimer Davis, was 15,000 francs. Mrs. Wollaston Richards, the well-known tennis referee, who acts as local treasurer, is naturally very proud of the results of her efforts.

THE Metropole Hotel re-opened on December 1 under a new manager, Mr. Garrard, who comes from the Metropole in Northumberland Avenue, and was before that directing the destinies of the Café Royal. The gardens are looking better than ever, while experts speak highly of the two latest tennis courts laid down. Lord Charles Hope, Mrs. Satterthwaite, and Miss Ryan are among the many champions arriving early this month. The Cannes Lawn Tennis Club has added three new courts during the summer, making seventeen in all, and has been a much-frequented resort since its reopening a month ago.

THE Villa Rêve d'Or, which was the home of the Winston Churchills last year, has now been bought by Major Thomas Cochrane, who is comfortably installed there with his family. The Villa Edelweiss—for three seasons running the scene of much entertaining by Lady Wavertree, who is never so happy as when surrounded by tennis enthusiasts—has now been taken by Major and Mrs. Fowler, while Lady Wavertree has moved westward into the Villa Il Paradiso, out beyond the Beau-Site Hotel. Not far from her new home is the handsome Villa Monterey, the property of Margaret Lady Waterlow, who has just been for a motor tour to Biarritz and northern Spain while sundry decorations and repairs were being carried out. General Sir Arthur Paget, the doyen of the English community, has rented the Villa Kasbeck, once occupied by Prince Christopher of Greece, and noted for having not only an exceptionally fine view, but the largest front door in the district.

A PRELIMINARY and unofficial peep at the programme for the Municipal Casino, indicates the certainty that life in Cannes will never be dull this winter. Encouraged by the remarkable successes of last season, and by the extraordinary number of English and American visitors now on the Continent, M. Cornuche has drawn up a series of gala dinners and operatic and dramatic productions which looks like beating all previous records for variety and excellence. The galas will again be directed by Domergue, Poiret, and Duclos, three very skilled masters in the art of entertainment devising. A striking number of the greatest dancers of the day — English, French, American, Russian, Spanish, and Argentine — have been engaged, and everyone will learn with delight that the incomparable Pavlova will head the list. Another notable event for the Riviera—I believe for the first time —will be the appearance of our droll friend Grock and his Partner. Music lovers will have no reason to complain of the lack of concerts and recitals, for they will find a long and crowded programme contributed to by the leading artists of several countries, among them Kubelik himself.

THE hotels in Nice are rapidly filling up, and the Promenade des Anglais and the Avenue de la Victoire are crowded daily with throngs of visitors who divide their time between the allurements of the shops and the genial warmth of the sunshine on the front. We had last week a spell of what the natives were unkind enough to call "English weather," but it was at least comforting and consoling to know that it was far worse everywhere else! There is now plenty of snow for winter sports at Peira Cava, the little village so conveniently situated in the mountains near by. Incidentally, it is interesting to record that, stimulated by the success of this resort, a movement is on foot to develop a similar winter-sports resort at Thorenc for the benefit of visitors to Cannes and the district. Thorenc is becoming extremely popular as a summer station, being only thirty miles from Cannes, situated at an altitude of nearly four thousand feet in the mountains behind Grasse, and therefore easily accessible. As several of the leading members of the Anglo-American community in Cannes are taking an interest in the idea, there is no reason why it should not in time rival any other resort within easy reach of the coast. A SCENE FROM MR. THOMAS HARDY'S NEW PLAY

"The Famous Tragedy of the Queen of Cornwall at Tintagel in Lyonnesse" has been written by Mr. Hardy, on the tragic theme of Tristan and Isolde, and was produced by the Hardy Players at the Corn Exchange, Dorchester, last week. OUR OWN ELECTION ADDRESS

No doubt you have studied with close attention the election addresses of the Conservative, Liberal, and Labour leaders. You have probably come to the conclusion that Mr. Baldwin thinks he can get you a little more tin, Mr. Asquith wishes you to keep what tin you have, and Mr. Macdonald—(we do wish these fellows would keep off our Christian names)—wants everything you've saved up for a rainy day.

Mr. Lloyd George's contribution to the problem is an act of christening. He calls this election the "tin-can" election. There is nothing very novel or very unreasonable about that. The appellation might be given to any of these affairs which perennially secure front pages for people who otherwise would be forgotten. What is tin but a "silvery-white, non-elastic, easily fusible and malleable material?" Who does not know that the hair of an M.P. must turn white, that his purse is anything but elastic, that his temper is easily fusible and that he is, when he wants your vote, the most malleable material on earth. And "can" is short for candidate, is it not?

Now we want you to shut your eyes for a moment and imagine that we are candidate for the Parliamentary Division of Greater and Lesser Blah-blah (including the parishes of Upper Chawbacon, Halfpint Flats, West Wayzgoose, and Potlid Marsh). Now open them and read our election address:

To the Electors of Blah-Blah.

Ladies and Gentlemen, and Agricultural Labourers—

What a life it is! Here we were getting on peacefully with our jobs, rolling in tranquility, especially those of us who backed Tranquil for the St. Leger, and the Government has decided all of a sudden to have another game at elections. It is all most annoying. Horrible posters are being stuck up over all our beautiful rural districts, and our babies are about to be kissed by human mistakes with barbed wire moustaches. At this crisis we feel it our duty to come forward and solicit your suffrages on behalf of what would really do us all good.

Our Foreign Policy

Our view is that as long as Epinard can give a stone to any of our three-year-olds, and until we can find a man to beat Carpentier, it isn't much use asking M. Poincaré to step out of the Ruhr.

Agriculture

We are in favour of conscripting the whole of the 615 Members of Parliament and putting them to work on the land at 30*s.* a week. This would at one stroke solve the farmers' labour difficulty and save the nation 615 times £400 a year. No French beans to be grown by pro-Germans.

Housing

We would, if elected, undertake to go about the country with a pick-axe, and knock down all the horrible houses built since the War. The bricks would be sold in cheap lots to those wishing to throw them at the people responsible. Large size, for Ministers and Assistant-Ministers, 1*s.* a ton. Middle size, for Architects and Builders, 6*d.* a ton. Small size, returnable, for Bricklayers and Plasterers, 3*d.* a ton.

Temperance

This must be stopped at all costs, because it is a synonym for persecution of the vilest kind. All sellers of bad drink to be burnt at Burton, all American Pussyfoots to be transhipped and sunk outside the three-mile limit, and the opening hours of public-houses to be governed by the local thirst.

Women

Equal frocks, face-powder, and permanent waves for all. Because an ugly frump has a rich father she must not have better clothes than a pretty girl with no father to appeal to. Free issue of Paris models on the first Tuesday of every month. Girls may make their own selections, but any lady caught scratching another lady's eyes out will be put on the Old Clothes list.

The Weather

We shall, if elected, provide plenty of sunshine for Ascot, Wimbledon, Henley, Goodwood, Cowes, and the wedding-days of guaranteed supporters. Rely on us for showers in April, red-hot Bank Holidays, and a bit of skating at Christmas. We wish particularly to draw your attention to these promises as they are the only blessings which are not included in Mr. Ramsay Macdonald's programme.

Work

Every precaution will be taken to keep this down. Those willing to work will not be hampered in any way, but they will not be allowed to assume airs over the workless. Bronze medals for those out of work one year, silver for those out of work for two years, and gold for those who have never done any work at all. Drawers of the Dole will have it brought to them instead of having to go and fetch it, sometimes in inclement weather. Amount of Dole to be settled by applicant who will mention his requirements.

Conclusion

We appeal, dear Blah-blah electors, or perhaps we should say, dear electors of Blah-blah, to reason and not to passion. While the other fellows are either asking you to attack the currant and the crayfish, imploring you to do nothing of the sort, or entreating you to hope for the best, we are calm. No one can save you but Us. We are so intensely pleased with ourselves that we cannot help thinking you must catch the infection. Shirkers of Britain, unite! And if you don't vote for us now, give us a chance, please, at next year's election.

Lady Elveden is a sister of the Earl of Onslow and was given the C.B.E. for her services in the War

LADY BUCKINGHAM

Is the wife of Sir Henry Buckingham, the Unionist member for Guildford in the last Parliament. IF!

(After—Mr. Rudyard Kipling has finished with it.)

IF you can prove the merits of "Protection,"
  Yet hear unmoved the blessings of "Free Trade";
If you would favour L. G.'s vivisection,
  And yet agree that Baldwin should be flayed;
If you're convinced that tariffs should be heavy,
  To bring to life the trade that's dead and gone,
Yet sit upon the fence when Labour's levy
  Is favourably commented upon;

If you believe that farmers should have succour,
  That Agriculture's dying at the source,
Yet understand that you might come a mucker
  If such a policy were put in force;
If you are sure it's wrong to rob your neighbour,
  And disapprove of Socialistic doles,
Yet hesitate because you fancy Labour
  May, after all, be top-dog at the polls;

If you can prove conclusively black's white, sir,
  Or else, conversely, argue white is black;
If you can hold one view for half the night, sir,
  And then next day adopt a different tack;
If as a Man you're not above suspicion,
  A cross 'twixt Ananias and a bore,
Why, then you're fit to be a Politician,
  And what is more, that's all you are fit for!

"COMMENTS on CURRENT POLITICALS AND SO FORTHS"

AN ILLUSTRATED LETTER FROM OUR JAPANESE CORRESPONDENT

MOST DEAR HON. SIR—

KINDLY to compose the following muses which I have been nourishing and shall now decant.

Hon. peace pigeon have furled his pinions and are flown away to conduct his pipings in more genial environments. This are no place for peace fowl now. Indeedly no and very much on the contrary. The atmosphere are filled to the chock with political noises and loud boshings very prostrating to timid persons. War cries ring the air, which are also torn with manifestoes, propagandas and other explosive shockings. Canvas persons with painful joy smiles stalk the vote and lurk from door to door with honey lips and display their bunkums. Hon. candidates dressed with stylish taste in cigars and milky spats, adumbrate sons of toil with voluminous oraticals and nail lies on the counters with gusty fist bangs. Excitements, rackets and fricases! Even Hon. ladies of very prime birth and sky-blue blood, desert their family bosoms to distribute oggles and other feminine snares to meerish men, so they may betray them to the poles and undo them in the ballot-boxes. (More excitements.)

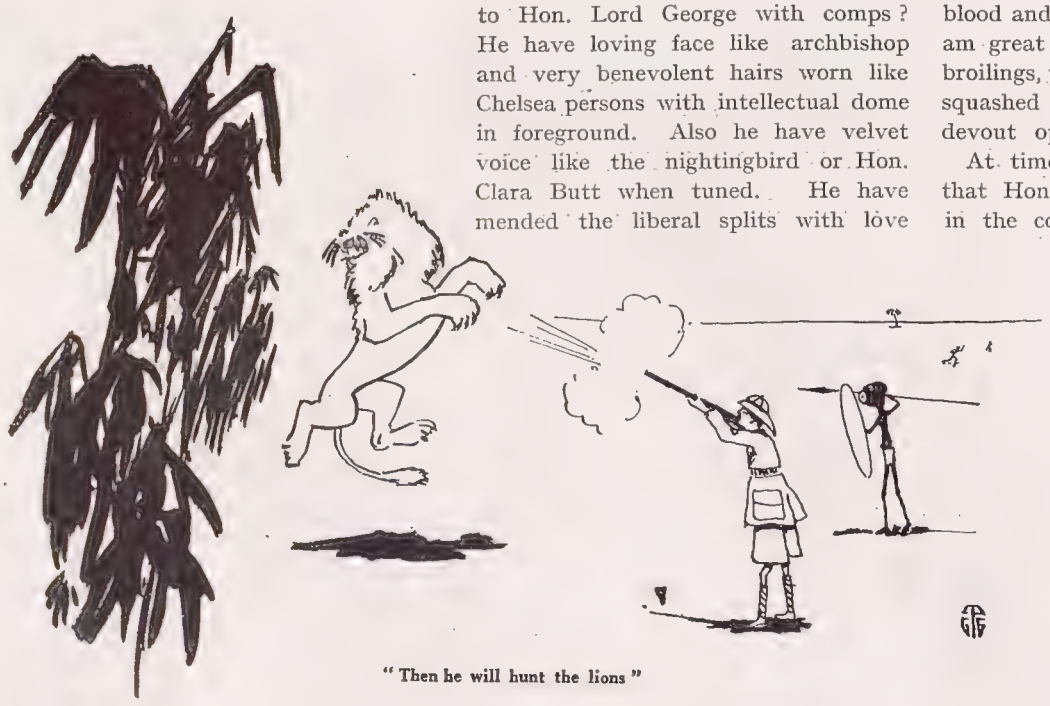
What for should these deliciously nurtured fairs blandish and guile so succulently, you make to enquire? Do they languish to become Emma Pips? (Warlike spelling for M.P.) Indeedly yes it are so. I salute my hat to these Hon. ladies who are so gritty they do not shudder to face the heckles of gallantless persons. Although all have not so much beauty as maybe Hon. Mary Pickford, but they are very good, which are much more precious burden then jonty looks.

It are not so with the Hon. political gents, because persons of this gender do not require looks, but only propitious garments with creases down the rims. They need not be painfully goodish either, which are an awfully great blessing and makes them lead very cheerful lives. Some day maybe the feminine politicals will refuse to be goodish much longer, then they will lead cheerful lives also with hectic laughs and other pleasant sins like Hon. Cleopatra. This Hon. lady was very mustard and vampish, and had face that overcame Hon. Julius Ceasar, so that a wasp bit her and she passed away in a pyramid. But this are history, so I will return to my rumbles and excuse me.

"Hon. Ladies who . . . . do not shudder to face the heckles"

"War cries ring the air"

Meanwhile Hon. Politicals are dancing the warpath with curdling hoots and shrills, shooting their sloguns at Hon. voting persons and making scalp noises very harrowing to nervous systems. Aforesaidly Hon. voting person are in a very perpendicular predicament, while the Hon. chief politicals make vigorous sprintings to reach the pole. Will Hon. Baldwin hole out with scalps to nil, or will Hon. Lord George romp home with a bull's eye and a full flush? Oh yes, that would be goodish tipping to put our steaks on, so I shall gaze into the glass darkly. What do I observe? All are very dark and murky, and I see no glimmers and glimpsings. Therefore, will I make no prophetics. If Hon. family shirt is dry cleaning or otherwisely put in the pop with affluent relative, shall I denude the



"Then he will hunt the lions"

Shall I make to present my little vote to Hon. Lord George with comps? He have loving face like archbishop and very benevolent hairs worn like Chelsea persons with intellectual dome in foreground. Also he have velvet voice like the nightingbird or Hon. Clara Butt when tuned. He have mended the liberal splits with love unspeakable neither garments and place them on Hon. Lord George?

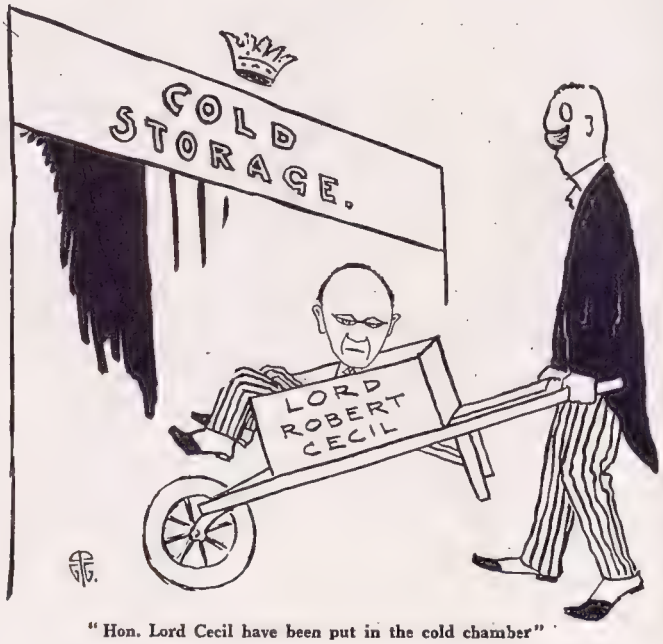
But how of Hon. Baldwin, you require? Ah, he should bring his election pig out of the poke for airing elsely no one will purchase. Perhapsly the pokes are empty and the pigs are flown away with peace pigeon to more milky pastures. Who would make to buy empty pokes denude of pig? Myself I do not adore tripes, even when fruity, because it recapitulates in the epitome with pops. Neverthelessly it are the stable diet of many 2nd and 3rd class home circles, and has many useful domestic purposes. What are use of burning homes fires for Hon. Sir Baldwin if mixed grills are several per cents more money to purchase, I seek to enquire?

cement, and mingled embraces with Hon. Sir Asquith and burned their chopper. I shall shout "Banzai!" when Hon. Baldwin or Hon. Sir George are elevated to the pole so as to make merry with port, sherry, beer, hot scotch and other semi-legal fluids.

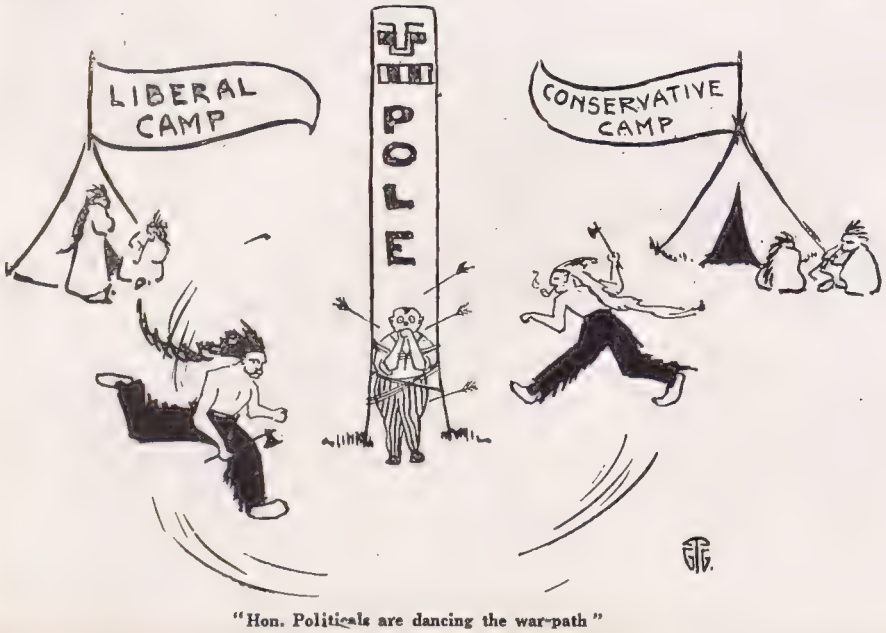
Until this sweet bye-and-bye, things are very saddish, and large numbers of otherwisely respectful and lawful persons are suffering election distemper which makes them lush for blood and other cannibalistic perks. I am great peace lover and do not seek broilings, yet my convictions have been squashed more than several times by devout opponents.

At time of this inscription I read that Hon. Lord Cecil have been put in the cold chamber as he will not combat the poles. This are pretty severish punishment, because he will now have to wear strawberry leaves and a cornet and sleep in the peerage. Let us hope he will make his good escapes from this muchly dreaded limbo at his most early convenience.

My heart cockles are warmed by news that Hon. Prince Renfrew of Wales are about soonly



"Hon. Lord Cecil have been put in the cold chamber"



"Hon. Politicals are dancing the war-path" to embark once more to carry the olive herb. Hon. Prince are very fond of this sacred fruit which makes him much adores by all peace-loving persons. This time he are pilgriming to darkest Africa where he will give love messages to the Zambesis, Mombassas and other dusky Ethiops. Then he will hunt the lions, grisleys, boas, and other sport beasts dangerous to man with much vim and dexterity through the jingles. Let us wish him good sportings and many happy returns.

Hoping you are still supporting good health, I remain the same as previously,

No. IV
DRABISH

I CAN see him now jogging on to the meet, a tight, compact little fellow, with apple-red cheeks and a high squeaky voice.

"Mornin', Cap'n, and how's the bay suiting ye?"

"Bones" Leighton, who has been abusing the bay for the last half hour, and Drabish for having sold the horse to him, swallows before he replies.

"He's lame."

"Is he now? Never knew that 'oss go lame before." Drabish's face is a picture of concern.

"Vet thinks it may be navicular, and that, anyway, it is an old trouble," says "Bones," uncompromisingly.

Drabish, scenting the neighbourhood is getting unhealthy, kicks up his horse, and fusses off.

"I'll come over and have a look at 'im to-morrow, Cap'n," he calls over his shoulder.

Which is about all the change "Bones" will get; for no one has ever been known to convince Drabish that he has sold a customer a bad horse.

Drabish has a soul above calumny. He refuses to believe that anyone really thinks he has treated them badly. From his manner at the meet, no one would ever suppose half the neighbourhood had a mark against him, or that the beautiful horses he rides like the golden idol, sometimes prove gummy about the hocks on changing hands.

To see Drabish exercising his calling is to realise to what high perfection a horse-dealer can raise his art. Drabish can look at a horse in a way that takes off half its value. And when it comes to selling—well, it is wise to remember that, because Drabish can get a horse over a place it does not follow that everybody else can. Drabish's horses have to jump when he is riding them, and well they know it. Some seem to know, too, that once he has sold them it does not matter what they do. Their new masters won't take them to a fence and squeeze them at it till they jump over or fall over; they are more likely to be sold in disgust to someone else.

Frankly, I never thought Drabish would try to do "Bones." "Bones" was a bit of a coper himself in an amateur sort of way, and I thought Drabish respected him too much. However, the old Adam had come out, and Drabish stuck "Bones" seventy guineas for the bay horse which was not worth seventy pence.

Time passed, and the eve of a new hunting season found the feud between Drabish and "Bones" still bitter.

Then word reached Drabish that "Bones" had been ordered to join his regiment abroad. Drabish wondered what the "Cap'n" would be doing with his horses. There were some good ones up there, Drabish knew; "Bones" was not the sort of man to ride bad horses.

Drabish decided to chance his reception and enquire. He rang up and made an appointment for the afternoon. The day was raw and misty, and Drabish's heart was melted by the friendly reception "Bones" gave him, as well as a glass of slow gin. He decided to make amends by offering fairly good prices. He found he was too late. All the horses were being sent up to a sale where, as "the property of an officer going abroad" (especially a well-known officer like "Bones"), they were sure to realise good prices—better than Drabish was prepared to pay for them, anyway.

Drabish was standing in the yard disconsolate at having done no business, when his eye suddenly lit on a horse in the paddock.

Now "Bones" had got all his other horses "up." Why was this one still out at grass? From what Drabish knew of "Bones," only some jolly good reason would have prevented him getting rid of that horse with the others.

Drabish enquired. "Bones" smiled, twitted the dealer for his keen eyes, and admitted that the horse in the paddock was one he had bought with a view to winning a point-to-point, and was not sending up to the sales.

Drabish went over to the horse. The animal did not look as though it had ever been clipped in its life; its coat was plastered with mud; in fact, it was difficult to see what sort of a horse it was. A saddle was fetched and Drabish had a canter. The horse seemed sound, and as far as the mud plastered coat enabled him to see, was a nice-looking animal. Drabish figured out that a well-known amateur rider like "Bones" certainly would not get a horse for a point-to-point unless it was good.

"Bones" would not listen to offers. He had got the horse for the point-to-point, he said, and if he could not ride him that year he might next. Drabish's suspicions that this was a good thing were confirmed. He offered £80 outright, then £90, then £100. At three figures, "Bones" clinched. Drabish wrote out his cheque, and departed with the horse.

Later that day I met "Bones" coming out of the local bank. He told me of the deal, the cheque for which he had just cashed.

"You would have thought the fellow would have known the horse again, mud and long coat or not, wouldn't you?" he said, "but he was so darned anxious to get him, just because he was the only one I said I did not want to sell, that he has gone and bought his blamed old bay horse back again."

"When do you sail?" I asked, when we'd stopped laughing.

"Sail!" "Bones" stared at me; "I'm not going to sail anywhere that I know of."

'VARSITY PROSPECTS

By "PENDARVES"

USUALLY, the aunts and cousins and "people," and the few thousand of the general public who can get away to a football match on a Tuesday, flow towards Twickenham, not knowing in the least which side is likely to win, though caring in proportion to the closeness of their alleged association with whichever University it may be.

This year, I suppose, 97 per cent. of the fifteen thousand or so people in the stands on December 11 will consider it an absolute walk-over for Oxford, and many will refrain from the discomfort of getting away from Twickenham afterwards for that reason.

I imagine that I am in a negligible minority in saying that there is likely to be a surprise in store, and that in any case it will quite probably be a close and exciting game. I only say this, having seen both prospective 'Varsity sides at work against crack teams, and having noticed the signs and portents. There are many. There is an inclination to boost Oxford into a perilous altitude of prowess as a team. This because it has had an astounding series of victories against some of the best club sides in the country. Notably at Bristol, though here Bristol was without a stand-off half for a great part of the game; and against a mediocre United Services team on October 27; subsequently a lucky and by no means convincing win at Blackheath; and a still flukier victory over the "Quins" at Twickenham by one point, owing to Lowe of the home side having failed with a place-kick. When one side goes on winning people are prone to think it is something very extra special.

Oxford this year are, indeed, a very good side. They have several star performers. They have Macpherson, Lawton, Wallace, Aitken, Humphry and Jacob, a sextette that can be, and usually is, very dangerous to opponents.

Cambridge, on the other hand, have so far received most of the kicks and none of the ha'pence. That is until they beat Blackheath, and beat them badly (24—5), on November 17. In this game one saw a new Cambridge XV, a good one. Then one began to mutter the time-worn phrase, "W-ell, I'm not so sure . . .," etc. It must, of course, be remembered that the beaten Fifteen was not at such strength as that which lost to Oxford, and it was further weakened a quarter of an hour from the start by the loss of S. W. Harris, whose old thigh trouble re-asserted itself, and who was throughout the rest of the game little more than a spectator.

On this occasion there was no doubt whatever that Cambridge were a good side. Add to this the fact that they are steadily improving each time they come out, and are by no means getting stale, as some people fear Oxford are; remember, also, that Cambridge, too, have some experienced and fast men in D. P. Thres (who has had such hard luck about a previous "blue"), A. T. Young, Hamilton-Wickes, the skipper, to say nothing of forwards like Ryder and Cumming, and bearing all this in mind, do not lay long odds about the Dark Blues.

There is another force to be reckoned with, and, whatever phlegmatic, nerveless Rugger men may say to the contrary, it is a force on such occasions, and that is the psychological effect on a team, most of them taking the field in an inter-'Varsity match for the first time, who have a reputation to maintain, and of whom the highest achievement is expected.

If things start going wrong they are quite likely, as often before, to develop into disaster. One has seen this so often. I am never impressed by the betting on these big events of football. The fact that the betting, as I write, is 6 to 1 on Oxford leaves me cold — except that I have just taken it twice for the fun of the thing, and because of my own general contrariness — I doubt very much if gamblers, or fervid Dark Blue supporters will get anything like that price on the day.

I think it will be a game of surprises, and a very good game at that. We shall see. Meanwhile I suppose no better arrangements can be devised than those existing at the Rugby Union ground for dealing with the ever-increasing motor-traffic? It is a pity to say "nothing can be done."

One has only to go to Leicester once to see how they, with a football ground right in the heart of the city, not only clear their ground of 30,000 people in about twelve minutes, but cope in half a dozen different directions with a proportionate amount of motor traffic. It is a fretting and cold anticlimax for supporters of the game to have to sit in the gathering darkness in their cars for nearly an hour sometimes before getting away. It is surprising how patient your game-goer is at these hold-ups; astonishing the stoicism of the marooned motor-driver, anxious to get home to his tea. One wonders how long his patience and good temper will be preserved—and what will happen when it leaves him?

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN — Having been unanimously adopted as the Unionist-Liberal-Labour Candidate for this division, and bearing in mind that this election is being fought upon a purely fiscal issue, I ask leave to address you briefly on the subject of the purchasing power of currency. In other words, "What Money Can Buy." By a happy coincidence there is a play dealing with this very subject, which is now attracting vast audiences to the Lyceum Theatre, and by taking that play as a model, I shall be spared the necessity of saying anything new or original, which is always a risky proceeding in a candidate for Parliament. With true political acumen the authors of this play have confined themselves mainly, not to that which money can buy, but to that which cannot be bought at any price. This method of argument is, I need hardly say, in accordance with the highest traditions of Front Bench statesmanship.

FOR instance, we are told that, among the things which money cannot buy is a contented mind. (Murmurs of dissent.) Oh, I am not saying that I go all the way with my party on this issue, but I am prepared to go far enough to get myself elected. (Cheers.) There is, as we all know, a great deal of discontent in this country to-day. People who have no money want some; and people who have some, want more. (Hear, hear!) Now if these people would only realise once and for all that money has got nothing whatever to do with their discontent, and that they can, therefore, be quite contented without it, there would be no need to talk about a Tax on Capital at all. The Government could simply lift the hen-roost bodily, and cart it away, and we should all live happily ever after. This theory of contentment is enunciated at the commencement of the play, and it is followed by another simple but indisputable assertion made by a parson at a gathering of the destitute. He said—and you will, I am sure, believe me, ladies and gentlemen, that in repeating his remark I intend nothing personal—he said, "Mankind's worst enemy is Sin." I trust, therefore, that all of you who are now joyfully contemplating going out and voting for the wrong man will experience a change of heart before polling-day.

THE chief thing, however, that money cannot buy is the virtue of the heroine in a melodrama. (Cheers.) This may appear a mere platitude, but it is the one outstanding feature of the Lyceum play. Rhoda Pearson is no ordinary heroine. To begin with, she has been in prison. (Oh, oh!) Yes, ladies and gentlemen, and she went to prison because she was a guilty girl. (Shame!) No, sir, it was not so bad as that. The British Constitution does not provide for imprisonment in such cases. Rhoda's little bit of trouble came to her for burglary, and it lasted three years. Rhoda is one of the destitute assembled at early morn in a West End Church, and she rises to remark in firm and convincing tones that she will go hence and sin no more. As she does not appear to have been trained for any other skilled profession except that of crib-cracking, we naturally are interested to see where she will break out next.

ON the strength of a personal recommendation from a young and lovely parson, the Rev. Denzil Norton, Rhoda gets a position as housemaid in the bachelor establishment of a sinful millionaire who has a beautiful residence on the Thames. Sunday up the river has, I know, always been—but, perhaps, that is hardly revelant to the fiscal issue before the meeting. The millionaire is Stephen Lorimer, and I think we shall not go far wrong in regarding him as an out-and-out Protectionist. (Loud cheers and counter-threats of personal violence mingled.) Well, anyway, the stately and beautiful Miranda Vane is living under the millionaire's protection, so he must be something of the sort. Then Lorimer runs the eye of the expert, as it were, over Rhoda Pearson, and asks her whether she would not like to be a lady with furs and jewels and the other luxuries that only millionaires can provide. And Rhoda proudly answers that she would not be that man's mistress for all the money in the world. I do not know the precise amount of money involved in this declaration, but it is clear that Rhoda is a young person whom Money Cannot Buy.

THE REV. DENZIL NORTON (DENNIS NEILSON-TERRY) AND RHODA PEARSON (JESSIE BELMORE)

But, ladies and gentlemen, as you may know, or may have heard, virtuous people are always the butt of the unrighteous. Rhoda's old associates in crime are afraid she may talk too much, and they conspire to get her sent to prison again. I understand that people are not allowed to talk in prison, though they may, apparently, write articles for the Press in their spare time. The gang that formerly employed Rhoda, rob the safe of the County Hotel, and meet in the woods to divide the swag. Rhoda creeps out of the hotel by night to warn one of her friends, and arrives on the scene just as one of the gang has been murdered. What is she to do? If she is found by the side of the murdered man it will be naturally assumed that because she has committed a burglary she is the murderess. That, at least, is the position the authors take up, and I am not sufficiently expert in law to be able either to confirm or deny it. The Rev. Denzil Norton, who knew, of course, nothing of the tragedy, happens to be in his bedroom writing a book, when he suddenly sees a sweet face at the window. (A Voice, "Oh, Archi-bald!") He opens the window, and Rhoda climbs over the ledge into the room.

ETHEL WARWICK AS MIRANDA VANE AND JOAN CASTLE

We now come to the great scene of the play. (Hear, hear!) Rhoda tells the parson of the murder, and of her fears in respect thereof. The parson knows she is innocent because she says so. And in melodrama we ask for no more evidence than that. (Hear hear!) He therefore tells her to trot along to her own room and no one will know she has been out of doors. But when Rhoda gets to her room she finds it locked, and she comes back with the news. Then steps are heard outside. The parson shoves Rhoda behind a screen, just as people troop into the room to hunt for the murderer. Somebody says that Rhoda was not in her room some time ago, and he, therefore, locked the door against her. Where has she been in the interval? The parson's answer comes pat. She has been in his bedroom with him all the time. (A Voice: "Liar!") Our friend has blurted out the truth in rather unconventional terms, but his conclusion is undeniable. At the same time frankness of this kind is a little to be deplored in a mixed gathering. Truth, ladies and gentlemen, is like a safety-pin. You may suspect that it is there, but you must not say so.

You will need no assurance of mine that at the end of the play the sinners are duly roped in, and dealt with as they deserve. In passing, I would point out that a very interesting part is that of a Lady Bookie (I understand this is a person who makes bets on horse-races, or something of that sort) who is represented in a fine, natural spirit of comedy by Miss Sybil Arundale. The Unpurchasable Rhoda is stirringly played by Miss Jessie Belmore, and the mendacious parson is very correctly impersonated by Mr. Dennis Neilson-Terry. In conclusion, I would add that the play has a gripping human interest, and that it unswervingly upholds those sturdy British virtues which—er—are our—er—pride and glory, and which—er—I may say, our forefathers bled to maintain. (Loud cheers.) Jingle

Tail Tricks by Tall Tricksters

MES AMIS—

LITTLE man, the moment has come when you must join hands and stand together to engage in mortal combat. Your prestige, your dignity, the halo which has hovered about you for the past few years as you promenaded proudly in your dinner-jacket, are at stake. The arch-enemy has marshalled his forces with the design to fell you with one cruel stroke. You are to be sent crashing down to the ineffable depths of ignominy. Squat and "tubby" or brisk and skimpy, so long as you fail to attain the mark of five feet and four inches, you must present a solid phalanx to thwart the machinations of the common foe—the lean and sinister tall man. This cunning, cowardly antagonist does not meet you boldly face to face. He approaches stealthily from the rear to strike you down where your armour is weakest. He is at your coat-tails. He seeks to make you wear them.

"In the coulisses of the Opera"

JOLLY little man, will you consent to be made ridiculous at the dictates of the tyrant? Will you submit to the sacrifice of serenity in order that the assumed superiority of the pine-tree man shall be enhanced? Will you abandon your present even chance of feminine conquest and allow yourself to be handicapped by a garb that transforms you from a man into a penguin? Let us hope that you will respond with one voice, "Jamais!"

WHY should the little man be browbeaten, made to look as if he had escaped from a circus, at the behest of some sapling, who thinks he is the monarch of the woods because he has sprouted up to seventy-two inches, and impertinently proclaims that "tails" must be worn in the coulisses of the Opera? Who is the tall man, anyway, that he should claim to exercise autocracy in the kingdom of what to wear? Has the pretentious prop ever done anything to deserve dictatorship? Have not all the Napoleons, the great and the grand, been the lion-hearted little men?

LET the little men flout the "Heads I win, tails you lose" decree of the six-feet tubes. They have but to button themselves firmly in the dinner-jackets like the Shah of Persia. He won through all right. (And lest it might be suspected that I am small in stature, and seek assistance for myself, I am compelled to explain that I have five feet and ten inches. But my sympathies are with the under-dog. His burden of cuffs is sufficient without a tail that can be cynically stepped on.)

THE men I like to meet are the men who are fearless in moral courage, do not you? The other day, on the course of St. Germain, I met André Tardieu engaged to play golf. André Tardieu, you will remember, is the statesman who drafted the much-calumniated Treaty of Versailles, and is the most serious candidate for the Premiership of France. When you recollect what has happened to Aristide Briand because he took a lesson in golf from Mr. Lloyd George, you shall appreciate the audacity of André Tardieu. I shall not ask you to take off your hat to André Tardieu. But I imagine you will not now think he is so bad as you might have suspected from his treaty.

"But what would monsieur have to follow?"

"From a man to a penguin"

A FRENCH statesman, who is enough bold to play golf, is a man whom it is worth while to watch. André Tardieu is a man who can look a long way ahead. Perhaps he thinks when he is Premier he may have to meet Mr. Lloyd George, and he does not wish to be under any handicap, even on the golf links. But, for the moment, I do not think he has revealed to the Chamber of Deputies that he has taken up golf. He is wise to wait until after the elections.

ANOTHER exponent of indomitable moral courage is Basil Woon, who is prominent just now on account of his severely criticised book about Sarah Bernhardt. Basil, the most American of English writers, can order dinners that affright the maîtres d'hôtel of the Quartier Latin, not altogether unaccustomed to freakish feasts. I once had the piquant experience to dine with him at the Café de Versailles, that gay corner of 'Parnasse, where one can enjoy all the supposed "delights" of the Montmartre dancings without to be compelled to bathe in champagne. After I had selected my quiet little meal, Basil ordered for himself olives and cornichons !

That would be all right to start with, said the maître, but what would Monsieur have to follow? Basil said he would require nothing to follow. The ma tre argued that he would have to have something with the cornichons and olives. Basil conceded that he would have some bread with them, but beyond that he would not budge. The maître d'hôtel, bewildered, retreated, kept popping up to inquire about the next course; but Basil tired him out.

A third man of courage is Charlie Brazell, one of the men who advertise Montmartre. As you know, there are methods and methods to advertise, and it is not often the most obvious which are the most effective. Brazell is enough adroit to mix up both sorts in the such way that he gets the best out of both worlds. You shall agree that Montmartre is well advertised. If you wish to know the system, you must win the confidence of Charles.

The other night he has invited a little party of writers to the Perroquet, the dancing by the Casino de Paris. There was just about enough space to pack in the party. "But the Perroquet does not need publicity; we know it is always as cosily filled as to-night," commented Candide. "Sure, but for once in a way I wanted you to come to a place which does not require publicity," replied Brazell. Nothing can stop an artist like that. And so it has been a merry night with no snags.

He thought they were for him, pauvre bête ! However, if Nina cannot throw, she can dance, as you have remarked at the Folies Bergère.

RACING NOTIONS

By "CARBINE"

When I got back to Town after the first day at Newbury last week, I found racing members of my club in high spirits over the success of Miss Caubeen at 100 to 8 in the Novices' Steeplechase. "We all backed her here," I was told. I replied that they were lucky to have won their money. And so they were, for if there had not been that unfortunate scrimmage two fences from home I question whether Miss Caubeen would have been nearer than third. A swerving horse completely put Charlie Wise and Canopus out of the race, and it was rough for the supporters of those animals to see them blotted out through no fault of their own. However, these things will happen in National Hunt racing, and the only thing for the disappointed ones to do is to follow Charlie Wise and Canopus until they get their money back.

Newbury Sport

Owing to the frost, it was lucky that we got any racing at all in the early part of last week. At Birmingham the proceedings were not particularly eventful, but we can always depend upon getting lively sport at Newbury, and the quality of the racing there left little cause for grumbling. One of the most impressive performances on the opening day was the very easy success of Civic Guard. This came after a couple of victorious outsiders had left the majority of backers with very long faces. Civic Guard became the medium of a mild plunge, and delighted punters cheered him home enthusiastically. Another reason for being satisfied with his success is the fact that it brought a turn of luck for Jack Anthony. He had ridden a very long sequence of losers up to that time, and was beginning to wonder where his next winner was to come from. However, Jack went home rejoicing from Newbury, as in addition to Civic Guard he secured another success on Blazing Corn. It was amusing to see Shaun Spadah sprint after this horse on the flat like a three-year-old. There's plenty of life in old Shaun yet, and no bookmaker will be offering very long odds about him for the Grand National.

A Real Thrill

Now and again we get a finish in winter racing which for excitement could not be excelled on the flat. An example occurred in the Andover Steeplechase on the second day at Newbury. The heavily-backed Holdcroft looked all over a winner when he landed over the last jump with a lead of several lengths. But to the dismay of his supporters he died away almost to nothing against the challenge of Test Match. Jack Anthony made frantic efforts, but he lost the race in the very last stride. Another feature of this afternoon's sport was the delightful show which First Magic gave when winning the Juvenile Hurdle race. That he is the smartest young hurdler seen out so far cannot be doubted. But, of course, the season is young yet, and First Magic may find his equal the other side of Christmas. I was very disappointed by Agincourt's performance in this race. It was hard to realise that this was the same colt as had run second to First Magic at Liverpool. This week we shall probably see the best racing at Sandown Park, here N.H. sport always goes with a refreshing swing. Active Lad, First Magic, Assaroe, and Charlie Wise are some likely winners at the meeting.

HUNTING NOTES

By ARTHUR W. COATEN

A Chequered Month

What with frost, fog, and "foot and mouth," I am afraid November petered out dismally for hunting people. Goodness knows how far this cattle disease scourge is going to extend. Its dimensions are already most alarming, and the movements of hounds have been suspended in all directions. We must grin and bear it, though it is no joke for a stableful of horses to be kept idle week after week. And it is rubbing it in with a vengeance when we are told that the foxes are responsible for the spread of foot-and-mouth. Poor Reynard, what new iniquities will they try to bring home to you! This latest indictment comes from Cheshire, whose farmers have suffered worse than those of any other county by the ravages of the cattle disease. But surely the foxes of Cheshire cannot be accused of communicating the trouble to the herds of Scotland, Northumberland, and other parts where outbreaks have been reported during the past month. No; I think the foxes are blameless in this matter, though in countries where there has been practically no hunting this season the necessity of keeping down the fox supply to normal proportions is a problem which may require consideration.

Notable Runs

WHICH has been the best run of the season so far? I suppose the nine-mile point with the Cricklade will want a lot of beating. The drawback here was that very little of it was seen except by the members of the hunt staff. However, nobody can legitimately grumble if hounds race right away from the field at the end of a hard day for horses. A hunt of quite a different character from this Wiltshire gallop, but a noteworthy one all the same, was the tremendously long run with the Middleton towards the close of the month. Hounds were on the move for no less than four and a quarter hours practically without a break, and when they were finally stopped the light had given out. I am told that the pack worked splendidly, often under difficulties, and Colonel Borwick and Lord Grimthorpe are entitled to congratulations upon the fine working qualities of their hounds. Another red letter run was that scored by the Southwold in the same week. Here, again, it was late in the day, and the concluding stages took place in moonlight. Strange that these good hunts usually seem to come with the afternoon fox at a time when many followers are beginning to think of turning for home.

Dwindling Subscribers

HAS foxhunting quite recovered its pre-war strength? Practically every kennel is now back to its former proportions, and there is not so much difficulty in getting hold of a useful horse at a reasonable figure as there was three years ago. Now and again we see a meet with something like the old complement of riders, but on the whole the impression is that fields are decidedly smaller than they used to be. This view is supported by the fact that in many countries the list of subscribers is much smaller than was the case before the War. It has been recently stated, for example, that the Pytchley have only 160 subscribers as against 290 in the season of 1912-13. Now, this decline cannot be ascribed to any falling off in interest in foxhunting. I am sure that the sport holds as great a fascination to-day as ever it did, but the plain fact is that many people who formerly kept two or three horses simply cannot afford to hunt in these days of overwhelming taxation. When hunting was resumed on its old lines after the War, expenses had mounted up so alarmingly that plenty of folk were obliged to give up the idea of renewing their former activities. Things are a little easier now in various directions, but it will be a long time before the Pytchley and hunts which are similarly affected can hope to get subscription lists of pre-war length.

Team Building

A GOOD deal of criticism has been directed against the polo team selected to represent England in the International trial games in London next season. Considerable surprise has been manifested at the choice of Major Kirkwood, as he played no polo all last season. I learn that Lord Wodehouse was invited to play in the team, but he declined, because he believes that the side selected is not strong enough for the purpose. There is one school which maintains that Lord Wimborne and the other members of the Selection Committee should have selected Lieut.-Colonel T. P. Melvill at No. 1, Major Hurndall at No. 2, Lord Wodehouse at No. 3, and Wing-Commander P. K. Wise at back. In any case, it is clear that we are going to have the same old trouble in settling upon the best available four to go to America. And you can bet a shade of odds that when the task of team-building is finally completed everybody will not be satisfied. Somehow or other they seem to manage these things better in the U.S.A. Lord Wimborne can at least claim the credit of having got back the Cup in 1914 after other attempts had failed.

Two Hundred Years in the Fur Trade

REVILLON FRÈRES

1723—1923

In 1723 a fur shop was opened at 159, Rue St. Honoré, Paris, which by the time of the Revolution had attained a position of considerable importance in the fur trade. This shop, when acquired by Louis Victor Revillon, became the nucleus of the world-wide business which is to-day celebrating the 200th anniversary of its foundation.

During the earlier half of the 19th century the Revillon business, under its energetic founder, altered the methods, that had up to then obtained in the fur trade, from top to bottom. Louis Victor Revillon was a business genius and possessed that intuition that showed him the brilliant future of the fur trade. He sought, by every possible means, to spread the fashion for wearing furs throughout all classes of Society. He popularised, as it were, the uses of furs of medium value — Skunk, Opossum, Fitch, etc. Prior to his ideas taking shape, "furs" were practically confined to the expensive varieties, e.g., Sable, Ermine, Beaver, etc. To enable him to carry out his plans he succeeded in enlisting the help of the large drapery stores—then newly formed—as a vehicle for his goods in both Paris and the provinces.

Another of Revillon's original ideas was to apply fashions to furs, in other words, to make and keep fur garments as up-to-date and stylish as those of the dressmaker.

Before his time articles of fur attire were shapeless and, from the point of view of fashion, most unsightly, but the influence of Victor Revillon is nowadays reflected in every fur garment that is sold. Modern woman has much to thank him for.

About 1855 the business was transferred to the well-known premises at 81, Rue de Rivoli, to which the adjoining buildings were gradually added, until at the time of writing it occupies an imposing block bounded by the four streets, Rivoli, Arbre-Sec, Baillet and Monnaie.

In 1873 the firm, which was then directed by the four sons of Louis Victor Revillon, Théodore, Albert, Léon and Anatole, assumed as its business title the name "Revillon Frères."

In 1888-90, to keep pace with the growing expansion of business, the firm acquired a large area of land in Rue de la Fédération — close to the Champ de Mars, whereon were erected a model factory and a cold storage.

In 1904 the House, in order to deal with its ever-growing needs and at the same time to simplify its organisation, became a limited company with a capital of £1,200,000.

Simultaneously with the growth of the Paris House, various branches were installed and developed.

The London House had its inception in 1869 in a small office in Red Lion Court. Growing trade soon forced it to remove to an extensive building in Queen Victoria Street, and the same compelling agency caused the business to be transferred in 1908 to much larger premises at 180, Regent Street, to which, again, considerable extensions have been made of late.

A Cold Storage on the most modern lines has also been built, and the capacity of this building — which, is second to none in size and equipment for the preservation of furs — is 80,000 cubic feet.

A branch to deal adequately with the heavy volume of raw skin trade was installed in Queen Street, E.C., in 1919.

The New York branch, which was opened by Léon Revillon at a shop at 751, Broadway, in 1875, occupied the entire edifice in 1890, had a house specially erected in 1895 at West 28th Street, opened an artistic retail establishment at 670, Fifth Avenue in 1915, and in addition is constructing a building of twelve floors in which the whole of the raw fur and cold storage departments of the New York branch will be installed.

Mr. Victor Revillon, grandson of the original founder and the president of the Company, paid particular attention to the American branches. From the time of his first arrival in the U.S.A. he kept ever before him the idea of purchasing furs direct from the trappers, and in carrying out this plan there gradually came into existence numerous trading posts at which trappers could exchange their furs for the necessaries of life. The first posts were established in Eastern Canada on the Northern bank of the St. Lawrence, on the coast of Labrador, in Baffin's Land, and on the eastern shore of Hudson's Bay. The film, "Nanook of the North," which our readers will certainly remember, was taken at one of Revillon Frères' posts, at Port Harrison.

A REVILLON STEAMER WINTERING IN THE ICE

After the Eastern Canadian posts were put into operation a similar organisation, with the town of Edmonton as a base, was started in Western Canada. From the year 1902, a serried chain of Revillon Frères posts extended between Athabasca and Lake Winnipeg.

Having installed its organisation of direct purchase on the American Continent, the firm undertook to establish similar methods in Russia and Central Asia. In 1905 the first expedition was sent to Bokhara for the direct collection of Astrakan skins. A branch for buying and selling was opened at Moscow in 1906, and another at Krasnoiarsk in Siberia in 1908. Posts, like those in Canada, were established at Narym, Touroukansk, Monastirskoe, Doudinka, etc., and an important building was erected at Krasnoiarsk as a headquarters for the Siberian purchases. Business relations were next established with all the large Russian towns, and the branch, faithfully following the example of the other Revillon houses, was developing rapidly when the war of 1914 broke out, with the resultant effect of slowing down the activities of the firm in a marked degree. Personnel, material, transport — all were lacking, but with the signing of the Armistice business was resumed with energy, and new branches were founded, notably in London, at 61, Queen Street, City, and in the Far East, whither the Russian branch was obliged to remove owing to the political situation in Russia and Siberia.

REVILLON FRÈRES' AGENT VALUING SKINS AT A NORTHERN FUR OUTPOST

We have covered the history of Revillon Frères in this short résumé, but it is worthy of something far better, and, to deal with the subject in a fitting way, a book has just been published, entitled "The Story of a Family and an Industry for 200 years." In this may be found the epic of Revillons' struggles to create their Canadian posts, their efforts to establish their numerous and far-distant branches, as well as most interesting details on their remarkable organisation, which has served to place them in the very front rank of furriers and skin merchants the wide world over.

IRREGULARITIES AT BRIDGE

A CERTAIN Scotsman, not renowned for generosity, was in the habit, when dummy, of inquiring from his partner:

"What will you have?" (meaning, which card from dummy shall I play for you?)

He is cured of the habit now, since one of his partners replied promptly,

"A large whisky and soda."

. . . . . .

Why do so many people play Bridge in such "untidy" fashion? One need not be a martinet to object to the many irregularities that occur not only in private houses and domestic circles, where one might expect anything to happen, but even in Clubs amongst regular players.

I know a man who is reported to have dealt three times in succession. No one complained or noticed the fact, and, no doubt, he did it in blissful unconsciousness. It frequently happens that no one at the table knows whose deal it is.

"Which are our cards?" "Who dealt last?" "I believe it is my deal." How often one hears that kind of remark.

And it is all owing to the fact that many players will not take the trouble to observe the simple rules about shuffling and placing the cards.

The player opposite the dealer should shuffle the cards, and he should do this while the deal is in progress—not during the play of the hand, as many dummies do. Having shuffled the cards, he should place the pack on his right-hand side, so that they are on the left of the next dealer. If the cards are always put in the correct position no question as to whose deal it is can arise. To ensure using the right pack, players with bad memories should make a note of the colour of their pack on their scoring boards.

It is the dealer's duty to take the pack from the appointed place, shuffle them, if he so desires (the dealer is entitled to the last shuffle), and then present them to his right-hand opponent to cut. The cutter should cut the cards towards the dealer, and should not replace the divided portions. That is for the dealer to do. The cards should be cut tidily and neatly so that none obtrude. There is a superstition that a slovenly cut is bad for the cutter.

A B
Z

S—K, 9, 2.

1st Trick.—A led King of Clubs, Y played 4, B 5 and Z 3.

2nd Trick.—A led 2 of Clubs, Y played 8, B 2 of Diamonds, Z 6 of Clubs.

How should Z play the hand, and why?

Prizes are offered of three BYSTANDER Bridge Sets, value one guinea each. These sets consist of two packs of cards with scoring boards in a handsome leather case. The following conditions must be observed: (1) Replies must be received not later than first post on Tuesday, December 11. (2) Not more than one solution may be sent by any one competitor. Every competitor must give full name and address, but pseudonyms may be used. (3) All solutions should be addressed to BRIDGE No. 9, THE BYSTANDER, TALLIS STREET, WHITEFRIARS, LONDON, E.C.4. My decision on the problems must be regarded as final, and no correspondence on the Competitions can be entered into. Prizes will be allotted to the senders of the first three correct solutions opened on the closing date.

TREADING ON THE OLD MAN'S TOES

Solution to Problem No. VII

(a) Three Spades. This is the best call at the score as Z has no Hearts. I do not approve of a bid of one or two on the hand.

(b) Four Hearts. The hand is good for eight tricks, and with less than average hand with partner should be worth game. It is desirable on the holding to try to shut out all bidding.

(c) No. It would be a mistake to bid the Hearts, as A has the opening, and might drive the opponents into a game call in Spades.

Prizes have been awarded to Major Sheirdan Young, In-the-Wood, Basingbourne, Fleet, Hants; H. R. B. Thackel, The British Club, 2, Rue Beauvau, Marseilles; and Mrs. Bailey, Dunamase, Dalkey, Co. Dublin, Ireland.

AND THIS IS FAME

BY "CANDIDA."

FOR a fortnight and more I have been condemned to examine my conscience and air concise views on politics and on the why and wherefore of the policy which is to save England. And if there's anything that a woman hates it's to be pinned down to concise opinions. But I've made up my mind, thank goodness; I've pinned my faith to one of the methods which will lead England to per——I mean to salvation. And that's that.

WHAT has fame to do with the subject? Nothing. I'm merely longing to relapse into vagueness, for if there's anything in this world which it's impossible to reason about, with a "lo here" and a "lo there," that something is fame. Fame, the elusive goddess whom you wait for all your life and miss at every turn, until the last one, when, as often as not, she will attend your funeral.

IT'S not brains that does it, nor riches, nor beauty; it's not sheer merit, either, nor the taking of pains. I have known people who invest in manuals which purported to teach you how to become famous in a fortnight; but I've never met anyone yet who could live up to the manual rules. Five minutes' study convinced me that it would be easier to achieve fame without the rules than to keep up the rules that lead to fame. As a hairdresser person said to me the other day when I consulted him on the merits of a tonic, "Oh, yes, it'll answer all right if you'll only keep it up." If you'll only keep it up, "aye, there's the rub." Who doesn't know how the enthusiasm of one week becomes the tiresomeness of the next? The famous people are the people who carry things through, who keep on keeping on.

BUT energy and perseverance aren't the only ingredients of the pudding of fame. I went to a restaurant last week famous in two continents, as they say in the papers when they want to be extra impressive. The chef was famous, the dinner was famous, and there was a very famous, velvety sauce with a flavour that haunted the palate like the fine flower of a perfume, or the sweet cadence of a melody. So they said. But in strict confidence the food was no better there than it is elsewhere, and the chef was no more of a genius than the many unmentioned chefs at other superior places. Fame it was that made all the difference to one's attitude—and the bill.

THEY'RE stirring to read about, those romantic careers of fame. Take this one, for instance. She was a nobody and began life as a mannequin with a perfect face, a perfect figure, a smile that was irresistible and a something wonderful that you couldn't describe. She drifted to the stage, as was inevitable, though she couldn't act, nor sing, nor dance, and after a year or two she married some noble lord just out of his teens. Did anyone remember things? Certainly not. She went everywhere, knew everybody, her photograph appeared in all the papers. She was famous. And then indiscretion overtook her one fine day; divorce was the only way out, and back she went to her acting that wasn't acting, and her singing that wasn't song. Done for for life, do you ask? Not a bit of it. Her pearls were magnificent and her "Peke" the best that money could buy. In due course she married en secondes (and, let us hope, more lasting) noces an ex-grand-duke, or an Eastern potentate. She was famous, that explained it all.

BUT, oh! the boredom of a fame which is afraid of not being sufficiently paragraphed and photographed, is fearful of awakening one fine morning to find itself forgotten. Because fame is an unknown and unknowable quantity, and there's no repeating the miracle when once she slips through your fingers. "Tis better to have loved and lost, etc., etc.," so we're told. But with fame it's another story, for when you've had her you can never again resign yourself to being happy without her. I always think that the nice part about heaven will be that no one will be famous, or shall we all be famous together? It doesn't matter either way, for, as someone said long ago, "When everybody's somebody, then no one's anybody."

"On Show" Sensations

BY L. R. BRIGHTWELL

No. II.—WHEN YOUR WHITE HOPE SUDDENLY TURNS "RING SHY"

SPORTING LORE WITH A LAUGH IN IT

By "THE KENNELMAN." Sketches by NICOLSON

TO-DAY (Wednesday) brings a quite considerable Dog Show at Croydon — Scarsbrook Road — and one at Southsea.

The Sleeve Dog Association's Show is at the Prince's Hotel, Jermyn Street, next Wednesday; the Toy Dog Society's Show at the Lambeth Baths, on the following Friday; and between the two, on Thursday, the Victoria Park Toy Dog Association holds its Show at Hackney.

For my own part, I'm entirely with Major Harding Cox, in detesting the use of the word "Toy," in this connection. Outside golliwogs and such-like inanimate objects, it's an offensive word—in my Occidental ears, anyhow; however it might be regarded by the lord of an Eastern harem. When a Dog really is a "Toy," one is profoundly sorry for him, of course; and disgusted with the human who has forced that disguise on him. But, in my experience, not one of the breeds officially slandered in this way deserves it. They are never "Toys," naturally; but, on the contrary, given their chance, real little sports.

Mention of Major Harding Cox is here due to his new book, Dogs and I, with its seventy-four illustrations, and an Introduction by the Duke of Grafton. (Hutchinson, 16*s*.). A rattling good bed-book, this, for a doggy reader; a volume for the fireside shelf; a book to dip into, as and when the spirit moves you; and one to lend only with cautious reserve; for it's the jolly, chatty, bucking kind that, somehow, rarely is returned. (The high-browed tome may be fairly safe, but human honesty shows up poorly over the book of smoking and gun-room gossip, doesn't it?)

There are some doggy folk—those for whom the Show Ring is the whole thing, for instance—who will find themselves frequently antagonised by Major Harding Cox; but the great majority of all-round doggy people and sportsmen of every kind, will heartily enjoy his book, and feel complete good-fellowship where their views differ from his, because they will never lose sight of his essentially sound sportsmanship. Also, make no mistake, while an inexhaustible story-teller, he is in practical matters very knowledgeable. It isn't only staff college knowledge, so to say, but the genuine front-line stuff; even if occasionally expounded with some breezy exaggeration. In picturesque generalisation — as in his bloodhound poem, "The Hunted Man," his theories of Irish Wolfhound breeding, etc.—his leg-pulling may mislead the uninformed and annoy some of the informed; but his views on feeding, training, working, and the like, are sound as a bell and genuinely helpful; and his book, not only better than the curate's egg, is good as a good dinner.

I've not yet seen Lieut.-Colonel E. H. Richardson's new book, Watch-Dogs: Their Training and Management, published, I think, by Hutchinson's, but mean to read it, of course; for its author's been handling Dogs for thirty years, so it would be wasteful to miss his conclusions. Easily beating the world in Dog-breeding, we are not doing nearly the amount of training we should do. A man wrote me the other day that at the recent big Swiss Show (Zurich) the St. Bernards were not nearly so good as the best of ours in England; and Germans and Frenchmen say the same of Dachshunds and Alsatians. But for training—well, I hope Lieut.-Colonel Richardson's book may give it a fillip.

It's stated, I see, that the publishers of Everybody's Dog Book have something very special up their sleeves for next year, in the shape of "the first Dog book of its kind ever produced; an entirely new kind of Dog book." Well, I'm no longer young enough to be a sceptic, but it will have to be mighty good if it's to beat Everybody's Dog Book. The coming of these different publications all goes to show the strongly flourishing conditions of post-War Dogdom. Let's hope it will extend to the rest of us—after the Election!

A correspondent's suggestion that subscriptions are not coming in as well as they should for the vitally important Distemper Research Fund, because the new antiseptic, which I believe is derived from, or akin to, the essential principles of garlic, is proving a good preventive, strikes me as away beside the mark. The garlic stuff is first-rate, but, believe me, it doesn't lessen the urgent need for thorough research into the causes, prevention and cure of Distemper. So do, please, ante up, all you friends of the Dog. In Hounds alone, Distemper losses last month were simply cruel—terribly heavy monetarily, too.

It is not feasible to set forth in these Notes the tables of points of the different breeds——too many breeds, and too many points. The Clubs of the respective breeds should be applied to. (See Everybody's Dog Book or Show Dogs).

The Irish Terrier is no more "impossibly pugnacious" than the average good amateur boxer among humans; and, decently bred and educated, is as good a sahib and sportsman.

The Scottish Terrier will never "drop right out of favour," no, not if forty "fashionable new-comers" threaten his vogue, because he is real, and wholesome, and clean grit through to his toe-nails; and, too, because he is as rich in distinctive personality as, say, the countryman of northern Caledonia—a real little man of a Dog.

The law of the land does not permit a farmer, or anyone else, to kill a Dog for the act of trespassing on his land, even though the trespass is harmful. Your remedy lies in prosecution, for damages. But prevention remains better than any remedy—and safer. All the same, where that has failed, and a killing has followed trespass, it's your absolute duty to prosecute up to the hilt; quite apart from your own interest.

"Answers to all sorts of questions"

LONDON, December 3

DEAR COUSIN—

RIGHT in the worst throes of it, we are, all these last breathless days. And on this Thursday next as ever is there's to be that final, fatal and decisive climax to all our hopes and strugglings and feverish canvassings (if so be we've happened to join in, and that's, b'lieve me, the one and only way to enjoy it even one little bit)—called Polling Day.

卐

RATHER lovely in a way, you know, to be swept right up into the vortex of this political affair that men, once long ago I b'lieve, used to consider their very own special province and privilege. . . . To go into it up to the eyes and strain every nerve and use every art to get your man in. . . . To see all the workings of what they call the "political machine"—and 'straordinarily odd and complicated business it is, too, 'tween you and me . . . To work and to watch—and in the end, dear cousin, b'lieve me, rather to smile, p'raps, quietly, just to oneself. . . .

卐

'COS, you know, they're so clever, these politicians and people. Pos'tively scintillating finesse and guile and diplomacy and all the rest of it. Devising (only their secretaries mostly do that) answers to all sorts of questions that may possibly and conceivably be asked, and even sometimes, I'm told (the super-guileful ones), actually inventing and arranging for situations and contre'emps that they'll come out of with a brilliant, previously prepared retort and triumphantly flying colours!

卐

JUST every now and then, d'you know, I've rather wondered, whether, p'raps, in some future state—some at present 'parently unattainable Utopia—it mightn't be possible to have an election just on the real big straight issues that matter most. Not the precise amount of duty, I mean, that there ought to be on tinned lobster or canned salmon—though, of course, those are frightfully important, too—but such questions as, f'rinstance, a minimum wage of £500 a year for everyone, 'cluding women, for doing work their so-called (male) superiors get 'bout £5,000 a year for just signing or initialling . . .

卐

COMPULSORY provision of at least one nice party per week for all married women—the unmarried ones can gen'lly look after 'emselves, if they're worth their . . . powder puffs. No infant of either sex to be invited to flutter delightfully but sometimes superfluously into the world unless it can be guaranteed its proper send-off at Winchester, Eton, St. Andrews, Roedean, Oxford, Cambridge, Somerville or Girton. All men, and women, to pass an examination at the age of eighteen in the arts or sciences of (1) dancing (2) sports (3) conversation (the lighter kind), or in default thereof to be condemned to take a course of Pelmanism or typewriting or shorthand at somebody's college somewhere in the City. . . .

"At St. Moritz"

ALL men at the age of, say, twenty-five, to be (temporarily) deprived of all the privileges of citizenship if they are unable to satisfy the examiners as to their power to (a) flirt, (b) choose the right restaurant for lunch (c) select the one and only hat for their feminine appendage of the moment (d) know what's the best play going (e) find a taxi at any given moment, however hard it may happen to be raining, hailing, or thunder-and-lightning.

卐

MEANWHILE, quite lots of nice and tempting distractions there've been going on, too, spite of all the talk there's been 'bout the Election upsetting all the parties and things. Has certainly put a good lot of 'em off, but we've managed to go around all the same and even sample a new play or two, or revival, like, f'rinstance, The Importance of Being Earnest at the Haymarket, that everyone said was the most brilliant thing Oscar Wilde ever wrote, and one of the two or three immortal comedies in the world.

卐

SAD—isn't it?—how plays and books do age, as the years go on, and get, all but just a very few of the very best, so out of date and wrong. That's what's happened, alas, to The Importance, spite of all the d'lightful things in it, like about how it looks so bad for women to flirt with their own husbands, 'cos it's washing one's clean linen in public. And how the old-fashioned respect for the young is fast dying out, etcet.

卐

THOSE are brilliant for always in their own way, but seems so odd that anyone could ever have thought and said most of what they do say, even so long as thirty years ago. All the little things that matter do change so. Just think, they didn't even have cars and telephones, those days. And the movies hadn't even began to be dreamt of!

"NOW THE ELECTION'S HERE" (concluded)

QUITE a lot about movies, by the way, in another play I've been distracting my electioneering mind with—Dulcy at the Cri. And a perfectly lovely scenario writer-man there is in it, too, Ernest Milton, to wit, who talks rapturous nonsense and elopes. Also Renée Kelly as a sweetly irresponsible wife, who does all the wrong things with the very best of motives, and thoroughly upsets all the apple-carts till just the very end, when all ends happily. As I think meself it always ought to in plays and books and things when we can make it so. Don't often get the chance in real life, do we?

NOT that life isn't really rather extra-special lovely these winter days, what? When there's arrived, 'definitely and decidedly at last, a bite in the air to show us it really means business. When we've woke up and drawn our blinds to find all the trees an exquisite tracery of white and all the leaves framed and outlined in the lovely rime. And all that sort of deep intense stillness in the air that only comes with frost, and is, I do think, just about the most peaceful, and same time exhilarating, thing there is in all the whole world.

ICE on the ponds, too—must say I do love all these childish pleasures, don't you? And not sure I don't like the kind of ice that doesn't bear you best. 'Cos then you keep it, and it goes on being strangely still and beautiful and only Jinks, the wire-haired, perchance, or Peter the spaniel, will venture on it for a few yards, sprawling ungracefully the while, and very soon tottering timidly to the bank. Whereas when it's skatable, very soon it's covered and cut up, and made into a sort of public highway, and all its fascinating silence vanished and gone.

'COURSE our skating, when we get it ('cept p'raps in the Fens) is such a tiny little affair, even at the winter sports places like St. Moritz, Mürren, Adelboden, Chamonix, and the rest. Mostly rinks, large or small, that you get it on. But in Holland—there, even when it's been freezing for weeks and every one in the whole country's on skates, you can still get that wonderful silence of the ice, only broken by the glorious thrilling, singing rhythmic ring of your own blades as you swing along straight ahead for miles and miles and miles. . . .

WHOLE country being simply a maze of canals, you see, you can skate from one end to the other 's long as you know your way. Have gone at least two or three miles out of my way 'fore now, skating there, 'cos of having taken the wrong turning! But, oh, to be in Holland, for anyway a day or two, when winter's there.

NOT that England, 'cluding its little old capital, isn't, of course, the best place of all for all the time, what with dancing to keep us warm these winter nights. Rector's for warmth, f'rinstance. Where the new Cabaret show, 'cluding, of course, one of the dancing Harris girls, helped in the general Thanksgiving Celebs. on November 29—tho' don't suppose the old Pilgrim Fathers would have approved, do you? And the nice new intime Regent's Park Country Club, where Andrew, the model maître d'hôtel, mixes for his favourites his own special sauce Smitane—lovely sizzling melted butter with a dash of champagne that gives such a piquancy to the faisan roti.

"Three Arts Ball"

"All men's business to pass an exam in dancing"

AND then, of course, there's all the joys of Christmas shopping to be had. Which I always think are so very much improved if you only firmly make your mind up on the point that the labourer is worthy of his hire, and thou shalt not muzzle the stalled ox, and all that sort of thing—insist, in other words, on buying yourself something in the way of a hat or frock, or even it may be a bag and some shoes, and other mere oddments, as a kind of commission on buying all the presents for all the other people.

OR, for that matter, some rich and rare stuff for a fancy dress frock, seeing as it's the season for such gaieties. And, oh, my dear, by the way, have got such a lovely creation for the Three Arts Ball this Thursday as ever is, just after the polling's done and over. Not too much of it, you know, 'nfact rather less. But, of course, it'll be wrapped well up in voluminous cloak 'fore we enter Covent Garden. And, once inside—well, nothing matters any more, does it, till the car comes along about four or five g.m., as they say?

AND then there's the Chelsea Arts at the end of the month at the Albert Hall—what lots of nice things to look forward to!

With love, yours ever,

BLANCHETTE

THE MOST POPULAR ACTOR!

Everybody—Everywhere—Now Voting in Our New £500 Competition

THE election spirit is in the air these days, and throughout the country ardent politicians are talking themselves hoarse in their strenuous efforts to champion the glorious cause of Free Trade, or Tariff Reform, or, perchance, the Capital Levy.

Many reasons have been advanced for the Government's determination to go to the country, but we feel sure the real and true reason was—THE BYSTANDER. Since the inauguration of our new Stage Favourites' Election to discover who is the most popular actor, readers all the world over, from Streatham to Samarkand, from Honduras to Holborn, have been hastening to record their votes for their favourite actors. Doubtless "those set in authority over us," having observed what popularity our election scheme has created, decided to try their hand at an election on their own account. But it is a very moot point whether their election can hope to attain a degree of popularity anywhere approaching THE BYSTANDER Stage Favourites' Election.

In voting for their most popular actor, BYSTANDER readers are not called upon to visit cold, draughty booths, wherein they must record their vote under the eagle eyes of a section of the local constabulary. No! They can get all this done by their own fireside, and, being enlightened citizens, are not tied down to one ballot-paper, but can vote as many times as they please.

No wonder, then, that our poll is so heavy, for the voting papers are pouring in at such a rate that it is rumoured that the Postmaster-General will be taking on a lot of extra workers in the near future.

£500 CASH PRIZES FOR READERS

THE BYSTANDER offers £500 in cash prizes to be divided as follows :—

1st Prize, £250 : 2nd Prize, £100 : 3rd Prize, £50

And Twenty Prizes of £5 Each to readers who succeed in giving correctly, or most nearly correctly, a list of ten actors in the order voted by the majority to be the most popular.

FOR THE ACTOR HEADING THE POLL

To the "star" who receives the greatest number of votes, and is thus acclaimed the most popular actor of the day, THE BYSTANDER, on behalf of a great host of admirers, and as a token of their regard and esteem, will present a souvenir gift in the form of a cabinet of 1,000 of the famous La Corona "Corona" cigars. The cigars which will make up this gift have been specially prepared for THE BYSTANDER at the La Corona Factory in Havana.

WHAT YOU HAVE TO DO—is very simple. A BYSTANDER Selection Committee has chosen twenty actors (whose names appear below) as being most representative of the leading stage favourites of to-day.

Go through these very carefully, and select and vote for (see voting paper on page 3 of cover) the ten actors who stand highest in your affections. Fill in their names on the voting paper. The decision will be made by popular vote. The ten actors, of the twenty named above, receiving the most votes will be accepted as the most popular.

The first prize of £250 cash will be awarded to the reader whose voting list, in correct order, most nearly approximates to the ten favourites voted the most popular. The second prize of £100 will go to the sender of the next most nearly correct voting list—and so on.

There is no entrance fee.

The competition will remain open until December 31.

PICTURE PLAYS

AS SEEN FROM THE STALLS

"ARMAGEDDON"

We called it a side-show. We were inclined to believe the men who went to fight under Lord Allenby in Palestine had "cushy jobs." We did not realise that desert sand could be as deadly an enemy as Flanders mud. We read of names, Jerusalem, Jordan, Gaza, Damascus, and the rest of them, and it seemed like a Cook's tour of the Holy Land.

It was not so.

In the film Armageddon, now at the Tivoli, it is shown that the Palestine campaign was a great undertaking, fraught with immense spiritual and political significance, and that victory came in the end to the troops of the British Empire only after they had achieved miracles of physical endurance.

This film, produced by British Instructional Films, and released by New Era, is a dramatic motion-picture record of the Palestine Campaign. The scenario for the film was written by Major-General Sir George Aston, K.C.B., and checked by Major-General Sir L. J. Bols, K.C.B., who was Chief of Staff to Lord Allenby.

The completed film has been passed and approved by His Majesty's Army Council, which has given the exclusive use of official films taken during the War. In the same way the French War Department has granted the use of Arab incidents now among French Government film records of the War. But, of necessity, many of the most inspiring incidents of the campaign have had to be reconstructed, including the heroic episodes which resulted in the award of the Victoria Cross, the swimming of the Jordan, the surrender of Jerusalem, the charge of the Warwicks at Huj, and the charge of the London Scottish over open country, in the face of machine-gun fire.

Armageddon is a picture, not merely of British, but also of British Empire significance. Australian and Indian troops fought side by side with the men from home. Therefore, when this film goes out to the ends of the Empire, it will go, not just as an entertainment, but as an inspiration. It is a dramatic record for all time, of the valour of British Empire fighting men. Its true value is best realised if we try to imagine the treasure which a motion picture record of English comrades of other times would be to-day. This is living history.

I am especially glad that in this record of heroism due tribute has been made to the dead. Our gratitude is due to Mr. Rudyard Kipling for giving permission to quote from his Recessional, and giving us the most emotion-laden sub-titles that I have ever seen flashed on a screen.

FLOGGING DEAD HORSES.

BY H. DENNIS BRADLEY.

"To flog a dead horse" is a phrase which modernly interpreted means the flagellation of sentimental vulgarity. But, with new thought lustily breeding and a new generation autocratically discarding the degradation of sentimentality, the time-worn construction of pseudo-dramatic laws and orders has become merely farcical.

Despite the present chaos the world is not retrogressive. Minds of value still exist, and whatever flare the "dictator" daily Press may exhibit to-day one may be sure that intellect has extinguished yesterday. These comic cuts and capers cease to appeal or to have effect. They merely represent atavistic puerilities.

We are sick of the boosts, puffs, stunts, bolsterings, cajolings, bleatings, bludgeonings, and pestiferous influences of the vulgar Press on the drama, politics, life, love, and all the fundamentals which it fails to comprehend.

The policy of an Empire or the virtues of muck melodrama represent subjects of equal significance to this arrogantly plebeian mentality.

What is the purpose?

Analysed, it means that a certain Press says to its public: "Don't think for yourself, but think as we tell you." If the public accepts this dictation it displays its subjection and acknowledges how easily it can be ruled.

This method of rule will fail. It is a melodramatic shout, and melodrama is banal. It ceases to thrill. It fails to inspire even a cynical smile. It is a dead horse. Why flog the poor beast's body?

Cheap melodrama is disgustingly immoral. The villain and the villainess enjoy a superb life of luxury until just before the curtain falls, and the anæmic heroine and the peculiarly idiotic hero suffer deserved mental and physical torture until the night clubs open. It is a miserable philosophy and an appalling entertainment.

For the real comedy of life one must play one's part with graceful manners. This subtle illusion is assisted by the clothes of Pope and Bradley. Lounge Suits from £9 9s. Dinner Suits from £14 14s. Dress Suits from £16 16s. Overcoats from £7 7s. Riding Breeches from £4 14s. 6d.

Because of the costliness of the very old spirit that gives "Red Tape" its outstanding quality, it became a question of either sacrificing quality or of increasing price. The latter was decided upon, knowing that, to a man, the "Red Tape" Public puts quality before price.

SOIGNEZ VOTRE BEAUTÉ

SOON there will begin the annual outpouring southward, from all parts of the Kingdom, of men and women, boys and girls, all drawn by the irresistible magnet of a happier climate.

Soon our womanhood will be ranging on swift skis over the downy slopes of the Alps — gliding and pirouetting, mohawking, choctawing, rocking and countering over the enchanting surface of shimmering ice—or contentedly purring under the smiling Riviera sun.

Soon, also, pearl-like complexioned faces will, by hard water, by wind sharp as a tooth and by blistering sun, in Kipling's Anglo-American phrase, be cut to—frazzles . . .

That's the price to pay, or the penalty, for this temporary expatriation.

Unless . . . due precaution is previously taken by seeking dependable advice that may be obtained only from Madame Helena Rubinstein, who has made it her life's task to study the effects of climatic conditions upon the complexion. At least let your dressing-case contain one or more of the following indispensable preventives :

VALAZE BLEACHING CREAM quickly removes tan, redness, "browning" and skin-stains, such as the discolorations caused by fur or dyes. Prices 4/6, 8/6.

VALAZE WHITENER instantly bestows a gleaming, snowy whiteness to the hands, arms, shoulders, and throat, until deliberately removed with soap and water or cleansing cream. Price 3/6.

NOVENA CERATE, applied freely as a cleansing cream, to rid the pores of impurities, and to soften, nourish and beautify the skin. Prices 2/6, 5/-

VALAZE BEAUTIFYING SKIN FOOD stimulates, nourishes, and removes freckles, tan, and discoloration of all kinds, preventing and correcting sallowness and other undesirable conditions. Prices 5/-, 9/6, 18/6.

VALAZE BALM ROSE prevents all skin discoloration by wind and sun, and forms a highly becoming foundation for finishing touches. Prices 3/6, 6/6.

VALAZE LIP LUSTRE makes the lips soft and so attractive in colour Price 2/6. (Perfumed Otto of Roses, 4/6 & 6/6.)

At the Valaze Salons, ageing, strained faces—those prematurely wrinkled through sorrow, ill-health, or "burning the candle at both ends"—those marred by unwanted hair, unsightly warts or moles—with youthful contour blurred or lost—eyes sunken and lustreless, with surrounding skin lined and loose—deep, forbidding furrows between the eyes or from nose to mouth—discoloured, spotty, florid, open-pored complexions—are restored to glowing good looks and charm, and made to withstand the strain of life. A lady doctor is in attendance to treat and supervise.

Mme. Rubinstein has this year made special preparations to give help to the "outdoor woman." For one thing, she is arranging short "treatment lessons," in which the specialist will give to the face just the treatment it should have when the test comes, decide what is individually needed, and show how application should be made. The fee for this is 10/6.

MOTOR NOTES

As an example of the improvements in transmission and the minimising of loss of power, a rolling test has been held by the Royal Automobile Club of Australia. Twenty cars took part in the contest, four of the first six being Vauxhalls. The winner, Mr. S. C. Ottoway, ran his Vauxhall from a short downhill start with the engine stopped and clutch disengaged a distance of nearly 700 yards on the level. I commend this form of competition to a few of the British motor clubs who are looking about for contests and novelties for their 1924 programme. Quite a number of people, myself included, are getting tired to death of hill-climbing competitions, which have now served their purpose and can be discarded. It would be interesting to see the cars that travel so well uphill take part in a rolling test similar to this Australian contest.

Writing about trials reminds one that the French electric lighting systems proved so very defective in the twenty-four hours' race for the Rudge-Whitworth Cup in France last year that the Automobile Club de France is going to run a test of the various lighting systems in an endeavour to get greater reliability out of them. Our own Motor-Cycling Club, with its London to Edinburgh and Staines to Exeter run each year, have done much to improve the electric lighting system as applied to English cars by reason of these all-night runs, so that nowadays one hears but seldom of anything going wrong with the lighting equipment. In fact, the correspondence columns of the journals devoted to motoring seldom contain a complaint against the C.A.V., Rotax, or the Lucas systems of lighting, which rather goes to show that our electrical equipment is better than that provided on the continent—at any rate, as far as France is concerned.

It seemed quite a good move for the Wolseley Company to give their customers an alternative of buying the car with everything on it, or else with only pure necessities. They do this for the Wolseley "Ten" two-seater at £250, and the four-seater at £299, which is the "just do" figure, but, for an extra £15, they are listed with these extra fittings, a self-starter for the engine, a pair of head lamps, and a pair of side lamps on the wings, together with a speedometer.

Anybody who wishes to buy a motor-car and has £450 or more to spend should write to Ruston and Hornsby, Ltd., Lincoln, and ask for their new Ruston-Hornsby car catalogue. This catalogue contains so much interesting information, as well as drawings and details of car construction, that it makes interesting reading—quite apart from its educational value to those who wish to know what makes a car run well. As the catalogue costs nothing but a postcard, there should be a great demand for it.

It is rather wonderful how the success of the motor show for pleasure cars and private carriages at Olympia brings forth complaints from those whom it is presumed to have benefited. Quite a number of prominent manufacturers have complained that the popularity of their particular exhibits collected such enormous crowds around them that the genuine buyer could not get near to plank down his deposit money, and so left the show disgusted. Poor fellow! Why go to the show at all to buy? Exhibitions are produced so that persons may see the goods and afterwards deal with the retailer nearest to them when they have made up their minds which particular make they wish to purchase. The manufacturer grumbles also because the agents hover on the stand as unsalaried salesmen to persuade the spectator to give him orders so that commissions may accrue to his benefit. And yet the manufacturers want those agents to do this style of business; naturally, they will not miss this opportunity of adding to their clientèle. The truth is that the trade does not want the exhibition at all. But the Society that promotes it, relies on the five shillings and half-crowns of the public to enable it to carry on its good work for the benefit of the industry and the public generally. If it were not for the profits on the passenger car show there would be no commercial motor vehicle or motor-boat exhibitions, no legislation committee, no benevolent fund and precious little salary for the secretary and officials of the S.M.M.T. What a boon the public is to the motor trade!

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

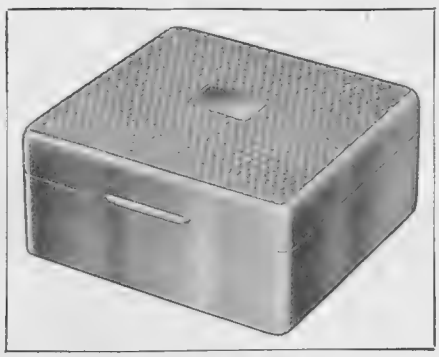
SOME HINTS ON THE EVER-PRESENT PROBLEM

TRADITION is, perhaps, the strongest thing in the world to strangle. Truly, we have progressed out of a few obsessions, but Christmas, with its festivities and present-giving, stands solidly square to the four winds of world upheavals, and our own Parliamentary skirmish in particular. Take a walk round any shopping centre you like, and you will find there the same eager crowds, discussing and weighing the rival merits of the various goods displayed in overwhelming profusion.

Pretty Clothes for Pretty Children

A genuine child lover, Elizabeth, 45, South Molton Street, W., always contrives to put a valuable spoke in the Christmas present-giving wheel. In view of parties, she is showing the daintiest of dresses, designed and made in her own inimitable fashion. Suitable to a girl of about twelve years is the example of delphinium-blue crepe de Chine pictured below, the skirt veiled in tulle of the same hue, ornamented with rows of narrow crepe de Chine rouleaux, and six round cabochons running down one side; the long bodice, with its quaint old-world tucker of tulle, is finished with wide sleeves, so becoming to a growing girl's arms, and on these and similar lines Elizabeth has a host of pretty party frocks to choose from.

For baby, who is usually beautifully oblivious as to whether his or her Christmas gift be of a practical order or the reverse, there is shown one of the sweet little coatees for wearing over lingerie frocks when taken down for drawing-room show. These are fashioned of many materials, the actual model sketched being of pink taffetas, edged everywhere with ravelled-out ruches of the silk and lined Jap silk, the price only 59*s.* 6*d.*



A NEAT CIGARETTE BOX
From Charles Packer, 76, Regent Street, W.

Covetable Gifts at Covetable Prices

From time immemorial Goochs, of Brompton Road, have been responsible for some of the best-dressed children in the universe. It is a subject they have made very much their own, and at Christmas time invariably increase their efforts to meet the unfailing large demand on their resources. There will be little hesitation to succumb before the useful and pretty white schappe silk smocked frock illustrated. This does not pretend to be original, but for children of a certain age there is nothing to surpass a daintily effected smock for service and suitability; a small boy of a like tender age looks perfectly sweet and very smart in his coloured crepe de Chine suit, the wee breeches buttoned visibly on to a shirt that is collared and cuffed with a delicate champagne silk.

Handsome Gifts at Reasonable Prices

Blessings many, will be poured on the heads of that very old-established house of Charles Packer and Co., 76 and 78, Regent Street, for thinking out and providing gifts that are well within the range of the many strained purses of to-day. A lead given like this, and by a firm of such high standing, is not to be lightly disregarded. Nor is it likely to be, when it is made known how a full-sized, engine-turned solid silver cigarette box, capable of holding twenty-five, can be had for 38*s.* 6*d.* One has only to feel the weight of this to realise its value, and it is, in addition, a perfectly finished-off piece. Prominent among the latter-day fancies—though, of a fact, it is a revival—is one for a teapot-stand to prevent staining silver or wood trays, an accessory that at Charles Packer's takes form in a delicate filigree silver-mounted overglass.

Cosy Comforts in Dressing-Gowns and Jackets

Those who have a dressing-gown definitely in view as a Yuletide offering are advised to make a bee line for Shoolbreds, Tottenham Court Road, where, by the way, the Christmas fare is going particularly strong. In the ladies' outfitting department they are, however, surely beating all previous records in their offer of a crepe de Chine kimono gown embroidered in Japanese style, lined and interlined, for the very modest price of 4½ guineas. The picture on the next page depicts this marvel, and will, doubtless, speak more eloquently than any words; from this price up to 10 guineas there is a choice to bewilder the steadiest brain.

Eminently useful for winter service is

Distinction and Character

It is amazing what good taste can do in the way of imparting a cachet to an otherwise quite ordinary garment, the dressing-gown, designed and made by Walpole, 89-90, New Bond Street, and here pictured. It is a model very typical of the house, effected in a fine light-weight corduroy velveteen, lined throughout with floral delaine, and handsomely trimmed with dark fur, a gown specifically devised for comfort and durability; the velveteen employed is exclusively dyed for Walpole, the colours including grey, heliotrope, flame, deep rose, nattier, etc., and ready to step into, the cost is 49*s.* 6*d.* In the blouse section there will be found the blouse sketched by our artist, a pretty model of heavy-weight georgette, the roll-collar edged with a kilted frill, and finishing in a knotted cravat. Priced at 45*s.* 9*d.* this blouse can be had in many colours, as also may another of rather simpler character at 39*s.* 6*d.*

SEASONABLE GIFTS
From Brigg and Sons, St. James's Street

Always of Irresistible Value

The utilitarian charcter of an umbrella is almost lost sight of in the artistic beauty of the goods designed and made by Brigg and Sons, 23, St. James's Street, S.W. This very necessary possession becomes really an objet d'art at this establishment, and the examples they are offering in the now approved "Stub" umbrella will do much to reconcile its votaries to the inconvenience of the mode. Illustrated is one with a Belier butt, which is ram's horn, mounted on malacca cane, a very favourite model, as is also one of Shagreen and ivory Milord with Belier stem.

The "Perfect Sporting" seat, for which the firm of Brigg and Sons is initially responsible, has again been rendered more perfect, the latest model having improved and simplified fittings for holding the arms together, and carrying the disc. In hunting crops, again, the firm holds a reputation second to none. A much favoured example is the crop shown of solid whalebone with leather handle, another being of closely-plaited kangaroo hide.

A HEAVY KNITTED SILK SCARF
One of many inviting gifts from Harvey Nichols, Knightsbridge

An Eldorado for Fascinating Presents

Refinement of taste allied with much originality characterises the wealth of gift suggestions to be found at Harvey Nichols, Knightsbridge; the shopping atmosphere of this establishment is singularly pleasant, and the courtesy accorded the most exigeant client of the most gracious order. With the small space at command it is only possible to mention a few of the many pretty things offered, such as a novelty fan-bag, composed of real ostrich feathers, with petal handle to tone, a charming accessory to any evening frock as it can be had in many colours. The always popular pochette finds attractive expression in black moiré, embroidered in steel and jet, or all jet, a very chaste offering, and only 39*s.* 6*d.*: a neat and complete manicure set in box, is assured of finding many purchasers, at 15*s.* 9*d.*

Welcome to the Waterman

One of the most successful candidates in the annual general election of Christmas gifts is the Waterman Fountain Pen. It has many good points as your representative in the House of Common Friendship—useful, easy to post, appropriate for relative or friend, personal, pleasing. This year the Waterman productions have been augmented by the welcome addition of the Waterman pencil—a slim edition of its pen brother. A splendid little gift this, at from 3*s.* to 10*s.* 6*d.* The Waterman's combination writing set is another visitor in our midst, and this pen and pencil set makes a most attractive gift. So there'll be no earthly excuse for him—or her—not to write to you! One can safely predict a happy Christmas for the Waterman people, Messrs. L. G. Sloan, Ltd., The Pen Corner, Kingsway.

A SMART HAND-BAG
From Woolland Bros., Knightsbridge

A Wealth of Toys and Games

Do you play Mah-Jongg? That is a query one hears on all sides, a frequent answer being that the necessary accessories are so expensive to buy. This protest will be at once dispelled by a visit to Woolland Bros., Knightsbridge, where in a card box, with hazelwood tiles, the outfit is obtainable for 17*s.* 6*d.* This, anyway, is good enough to begin with, to learn the game that has been played by Chinese for 2,000 years.

The toys here, too, have ever been noted for their original character and value, while the choice of hand-bags is equally superb. The example shown is a new black moiré envelope reticule, the front of Persian broché effected in shades of silver and jade, jade and rust. It is lined tan moiré, has a centre purse division, mirror fitted into lid, and is a real marvel of value at 19*s.* 6*d.*

English Fragrance

"In the days of lace-ruffles, perukes, and brocade,"—to quote Mr. Rudyard Kipling—London resounded with the street-cries of many and various traders; foremost amongst them was the plaintive song of the lavender seller, the words of which are still heard even in these prosaic days, proving that the affection for "sweet-smelling lavender" has by no means waned with the passing of the years. Many makes of lavender water which are on the market to-day bear witness to this fact, and to prove it to my own satisfaction, I intend sending a certain someone of undoubted charm a hamper of Royal Vinolia Real English lavender water, together with samples of Royal Vinolia lavender soaps and bath crystals.

A LITTLE GIFT THAT FITS IN ANYWHERE
Made by the Vinolia Co., Ltd.

Brighter Christmas

How to brighten our days—that is the problem that faces us all. The obvious, and apparently facetious solution, is—get a light. And you've only to look at the Aladdin lamp, made by the Aladdin Industries, Ltd., of 136, Southwark Street, S.E. 1, to realise how true it is. These beautiful creations—welcome "new lamps for old"—make excellent gifts. The light, though soft and gentle, is stronger than either electricity or gas. The lamp burns the cheapest paraffin without smoke, smell, or danger, and is so simple that a child can use it. It does, indeed, throw light on many problems of the country-house!

Embarras de Choix

A telephone, like most useful things, is ugly. But it can be made beautiful by means of those fascinating covers which the Maison Lyons, of Oxford Street, are displaying so alluringly in their attractive windows. Our illustration shows one of many—this one is priced at 40*s.*, but there are many more, for all tastes and purses, and very dainty gifts de luxe they make, too, either for my ladye's boudoir or for the more prosaic dining-room. And talking of dining-rooms, there are delicious chocolates and confectionery in bewildering assortment at the Maison Lyons—but these are all so well-known that discerning shoppers need no further telling.

A TELEPHONE COVER DE LUXE
From the Maison Lyons, Oxford Street

The Last Word in Luxury

One always expects, and invariably finds, the most recherché models at Debenham and Freebody's, Wigmore Street, but in their dressing-gown department this season they have simply out-Heroded Herod. The model wrappers and boudoir coatees gathered together, and in many cases designed and made in the firm's own workroom, are beyond the power of a poor pen to describe. Fortunately, however, our artist has slipped into the breach and sketched an example of the class of goods that are being purveyed in this connection. To the service of the exquisite creation shown there is culled a souple white satin, brocaded in silver, the half-back view revealing the five-flounce effect, each volant hemmed with white fur, which is repeated everywhere round the edges and sleeves, a handsome white faille ribbon effecting a fastening at the left side.

The House for Good Gifts

Value is the keynote at Harrods, Brompton Rd.; and it is little short of miraculous how the firm contrives to maintain this standard with so prolific a choice. From the smallest inexpensive toy to a piece of costly jewellery, value is upheld, and the Christmas fare provided there this season is fully representative of the firm's large resources. The handsomely illustrated gift catalogue is speeding its way through the length and breadth of the land, and in this brochure there will be found every conceivable gift. Where all is so good it is difficult to particularise, but full evidence of the above statement is afforded in the useful top-opening bag depicted; comparing the price of recent years, this appeals as a real bargain at 31*s.*, as it is made of the best black seal leather, lined, the size of frame measuring 10 ins. A remarkable morocco hand-bag, lined leather, with inner divisions, comes out at a guinea. The favourite pochette in fine grain seal, lined moiré silk, is priced at 52*s.* 6*d.*, and in polished crocodile at 90*s.*

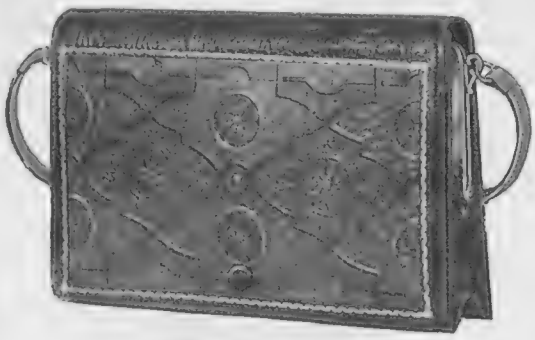
Thousands of Christmas Gifts

This sounds a big order, but it is absolutely true, as all will find when they visit Messrs. Dickins and Jones, Regent Street. With so prolific a choice it is as well to have



CHOSEN AT RANDOM

One of the many excellent hand-bags of embossed leather from Messrs. Dickins and Jones, Regent Street an objective in view, and if that runs in the direction of hand-bags, attention may be confidently bestowed on a dainty milanese fancy in choice coloured designs lined best quality silk, the centre division of suede, fitted writing tablet, puff and mirror, a veritable multum in parvo for 39*s.* 6*d.* The like sum will secure a useful silk bag mounted in imitation shell, very roomy and beautifully finished, complete with vanity mirror, a style that commences here as low as 21*s.*

Furs at Manufacturer's Prices

Many generously minded have furs in view as a Yuletide offering, and when the donor, as frequently happens, chances to be a man, he is often hard put to it where to go for value and correct styles. For furs of a sort are to be found everywhere, but only the best are recognised and dealt with at the City Fur Stores, 64, St. Paul's Churchyard; furs, moreover, at wholesale prices, for this firm avoids heavy over-head expenses, and affords its clients the benefit of actual manufacturer's prices—as witness the Russian Fox stole illustrated—a bargain at 12½ guineas.

Le Dernier Cri in Bijouterie

One of the busiest rendezvous at this period of the year is that of J. C. Vickery, Regent Street, where the fastidious and exigeant know they will always find the best and latest modes in jewellery and knick-knacks.

There is everything for all purses, large and small. Among a host of smaller trifles is a set of lingerie ribbon threaders in case, Vickery's

The End of all Shaving Troubles

THE COMPAX SHAVING SET (a British invention, British made) ends shaving troubles. In one handsome ebonised box is a razor with a solid blade (not a wafer) that laughs at the most stubborn beard.

As it lies in the box (blade still in razor) it can be honed and stropped by a few turns of a handle. It is given a new edge—not a doctored old edge—every morning.

The razor in the Compax Shaving Set is safer than a "Safety" razor and yet it can be adjusted by the turn of a dial to suit any beard and skin. The Compax Shaving Set ends perpetual blade buying and gives you the cleanest, sweetest shave you have ever had, repeats the performance morning after morning for ever. One blade definitely lasts six months, it will probably last for years. A renewal costs 1/-. Get rid of shaving trouble, and everlasting blade buying. Shave without "tearing," shave with ease and with safety. Once you have bought a Compax Shaving Set you will never buy another razor, safer blade, strop or hone. Compax is complete and perfect.

Ask your retailer to show you how the Compax works. You will be convinced.

Home Decorations

Young married people in particular invariably appreciate a gift for the home; the only thing is, one should know something of the colouring of the room and the style of decoration, also, if possible, the actual article most needed. Equipped, however, with these facts one can either go to Williamson and Cole, Clapham, or write to the firm for their special illustrated Christmas list, for this house is a very Mecca of beautiful things, a large number of which are adapted to modern housing capacity, which in the majority of cases is decidedly limited. If your need takes the form of an arm-chair, then there could not be bettered the "Chantry," either for comfort or price, the latter only 49*s.* 6*d.* Standing 15 ins. off the floor, the complete height, 3 ft. 2ins., the width across 2 ft. 2 ins., it is just the easy comfortable size to fit into an average room.

Effective Adjuncts for the Toilette and Toilet Table

Although jewellers, etc., of high pretensions, the Goldsmith and Silversmith Company, 112, Regent Street, W., are pleased to devote a large share of attention to lesser trifles in view of Christmas present giving, towards which end they issue a large special list for the convenience of their many country clients. Witness the silver and inlaid tortoiseshell mounted scent essence bottle shown, obtainable in two sizes and prices, respectively, 4½ ins. high, at 16*s.* and 3½ ins. at 13*s.* 6d.; and the petrol pocket lighter, sterling silver mounted, which has a splendid flame calculated to last about seven days.

Worth Purs(e)uing

Messrs. Boots, Ltd., can always be relied upon to hit on some special attraction likely to captivate the shopper in search of Christmas gifts which are both novel and serviceable. This year they are showing a hard grain Morocco Sabretache bag, fitted with a long bank-note pocket in the flap; it has also an inside purse division lined with white kid, and is fitted with captive purse, note tablet and pencil, bevelled mirror, powder-puff, etc., at the modest price of 21*s.*

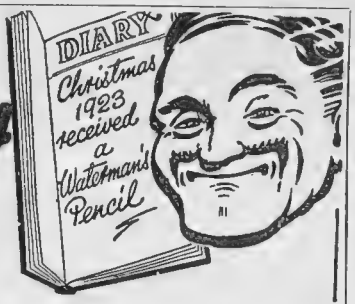
A Red Letter Day



Last Christmas she gave me a beautiful Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen which has never caused me one moment's anxiety. And now she has given me a pencil—not an ordinary pencil, but a Waterman's Pencil, a perfect companion for my perfect pen. This Waterman's Pencil is a splendid pencil. It is light, it is strong, it is beautifully shaped and balanced, it never requires sharpening, and the point is as rigid as though it were encased in wood. In appearance it matches exactly my Waterman's Ideal Pen; at the end is a receptacle with refills, and to make it still more complete there is a clip-cap to secure it firmly in my vest pocket.

ADORNMENTS OF THE DAY—AND NIGHT
A pair of Ciro Pearl earrings

Pearls for Purity

The best sellers are necessarily necklets in the Ciro selection of bijouterie, although this popular adornment is closely followed by rings and earrings. Perhaps there is no finer evidence of the value of these remarkable replicas of one of nature's most coveted gems, than is to be found in the fact that they are introduced into rings, where they come under the closest scrutiny, and used either alone or allied with scientific stones of various colours. A particularly attractive dress-ring shows three specially selected Ciro pearls mounted in a perpendicular line on a hand-made gold circlet. Creole earrings, tassels and large pear-shaped drops swinging loose in a platinum setting, ornamented with marquisette, all meet the taste of the moment. The three addresses where Ciro pearls are obtainable are respectively 178, Regent Street, W., 48, Old Bond Street, and 44, Cheapside, City.

A Write-Good Present

An excellent Xmas suggestion from Messrs. Mabie, Todd and Co., Ltd., the "Swan" pen people, consists of a neat case containing—for the male contingent—presentation self-filling "Swan" pen, with pocket clip, and "Fyne Point" pencil with pocket clip, both covered 18-ct. rolled gold, the whole outfit costing but 77*s.* 6*d.*; whilst the ladies' set, which is priced at 75*s.*, has a short size "Swan" pen and short-size "Fine Point" pencil, both with ring attachment in place of the standard-size pen and pencil with clip.

Artistry Plus Reliability

As a gift of a permanent character, many people very wisely look in the direction of watches, clocks or jewellery for a satisfactory solution to the annual problem of what to give at Christmas.

The discriminating will go to a firm with a reputation for reliability, such for instance as Sir John Bennett Ltd., which has long held a place in the front rank of watch-makers and jewellers, both in the City, where business is conducted at 65, Cheapside, E.C. 2, and in the West End, where they have a branch at 105, Regent Street.

Solving a Domestic Problem

Here is a recipe for Christmas puddings from the world-famous producers of Borwick's baking powder which is well worth trying. Take ¾ lb. flour, two large teaspoonfuls of Borwick's baking powder, 4 ozs. of bread-crumbs, ¾ lb. suet, 2 lb. raisins, 1 lb. currants, three-quarter pint of milk, three eggs, 10 ozs. sugar, 2 ozs. almonds, ½ lb. mixed peel, the rind and juice of two lemons. Clean and prepare fruit, etc., chop suet finely, also the candied peel. Mix all ingredients together, and bind with the eggs and milk. Turn into greased basins, tie over, and steam for eight hours.

To avoid Complexion Dangers

—dangers which are inseparable from our uncertain climate—gently massage the skin every night with Pond's Cold Cream, afterwards removing the superfluous cream with a soft towel. You will then see no sign of roughness or chaps in your skin throughout the whole of the cold season.

More than this, the same nightly massage with Pond's Cold Cream has a wonderfully cleansing effect, which cannot fail to result in a brighter and clearer complexion.

This dual purpose of Pond's Cold Cream—the cream with the emollient oils—fully justifies its recommendation to those desirous of improving or maintaining their complexion attractiveness.

"TO SOOTHE AND SMOOTH YOUR SKIN."

Both creams obtainable from all chemists and stores in opal jars at 1/3 and 2/6, and in collapsible tubes 7½d. (hand-bag size) and 1/-.

For winter, no less than summer, the complexion needs a protecting cream by day. Pond's Vanishing Cream affords this protection and exercises an extremely beneficial effect upon the skin.

The colonel felt uneasy. It was a rash thing, and moreover against discipline, to allow a niece to choose the wine. However, a promise was a promise; and birthdays—what? He strenuously hoped for the best, but was none the less surprised when he actually got it. She asked for "Big Tree" Sparkling Muscatel.

"Big Tree" Sparkling Muscatel is exactly right for most people—delightfully between sweet and dry. It is, and always has been, a French wine, made in the same way as Champagne—pure juice of the grape naturally matured many years in bottle.

A GIFT FOR YOUNG AND OLD

A Talk on Toffee

A fact which used to strike me very forcibly in the past was the apparent indifference of toffee manufacturers to the way in which their products were retailed. Chocolate makers have, for many years past, been in the habit of disposing of their wares in more or less artistic boxes, whereas toffee has been sold, either in paper bags or in tins which were fashioned on lines of utility rather than ornamentation.

However, the manufacturers of Sharpe's Super-Kreem Toffee have realised the pressing need of reform. Their latest production accurately represents a Norwegian milking-pail, and is as artistic as the variety of toffee is delightful to old and young alike.

"The Violet Dim"

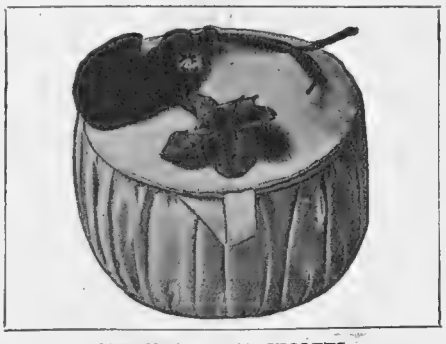
From the earliest days of English poetry right down to these prosaic times the poet has delighted to sing the praises of that typically English flower, the violet. Shakespeare and scores of others paid their tribute to this flower, which so unfailingly recalls the atmosphere of the countryside with its subtle, alluring scent. It was given to the Misses Allen-Brown, however, to turn our national affection for the violet to all sorts of practical uses.

At their nurseries at Henfield, in Sussex, where they grow thousands of plants, they are manufacturing all sorts of attractive violet-scented articles such as writing-cases, handkerchief-holders, nightdress-cases, pot-pourri bags, and a large variety of toilet preparations all scented with their violets. A postcard to the Violet Nurseries, Henfield, Sussex, will bring an attractive brochure by return of post.

THE ONOTO PEN—WELCOME EVERYWHERE

In Pen-sive Mood

Everyone is supposed to be able to write in these enlightened days, and who would not welcome such a medium as an Onoto? These lever-filling pens can be had from all stationers at 17*s.* 6*d.* and upwards, the self-filling safety Onoto costing 17*s.* 6*d.*, and the Streamline model, 21*s.* As Onoto stylos, propelling pencils, diaries, and inks are also sold in great variety, there is ample scope for choice and as wide a selection as anyone could wish in this year's Onoto output.



THE VOGUE FOR VIOLETS
A seasonable gift from the Violet Nurseries, Henfield, Sussex

Indoors and Out

The average lady theatre-goer who finds that a pair of opera-glasses are an indispensable adjunct at the play, would no more dream of producing a heavy pair of field-glasses in the stalls than she would think of using diminutive opera-glasses for long-distance use at the races. Yet, thanks to Messrs. Ross, Ltd., the well-known opticians, she can combine the two in one eminently tasteful and serviceable whole. For this firm has placed on the market the new Ross Prism Opera Glass which, whilst being extremely light, has a large field and combines excellent definition with six-power magnification. The very moderate price of £10 10*s.* should serve as an additional attraction to the worried swain who is asking himself plaintively, "What can I give her for Christmas, this year?"

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING (concluded)

A Safe Selection

If one is a Most Popular Actor, there is—so our Stage Election Organiser informs us—a thousand Corona-Coronas as a reward, in addition to many other guerdons of superlative popularity. On the other hand, one may not be a Most Popular Actor. Many of us are not. But there is no reason why one shouldn t be popular enough to receive a hundred half Coronas. If any ladies are hesitating (not necessarily in a leap-yearish way) here is the present that is always right. The words "La Corona" or "Half-a-Corona" on the band of every cigar is sufficient to give absolute confidence in one's choice; it is bound to be a most welcome present, and can be given with the absolute knowledge that the choice represents a most fitting Ambassador of goodwill—in fact, a true interpreter of the Christmas spirit.

"HALF A CORONA"
But not half a bad gift

A "Model" Gift

The normal boy takes to things mechanical even as a duck takes to water. Walk down Holborn any day and see the youngsters enjoying a mechanical paradise of their own before the windows of Messrs. Bassett-Lowke, 112, High Holborn. This firm has as magnificent a show of models as the heart of man — or boy — could conceive. Railways, trains, boats, sailing yachts, fittings, boilers, signals, engines, all sizes and types, and all those other things of joy and wonder. It is a place well worth a visit. If you don't think so, the young hopefuls will soon make you change your mind. So be resigned now!

BUDDING ENGINEERS
"Watching the wheels go round" at Messrs. Bassett-Lowke, 112, High Holborn

An Intimate Gift

Razors, like artifex and opifex of our schooldays, are common to either sex these days, and make admirable Christmas gifts. The Gillette Safety Razor seems satisfactorily to have solved some of those points that one has to bear in mind when choosing a Yuletide gift: cost, appearance and utility. The Gillette, in a neat leather or metal case, with all its accessories, is on sale at all stores, cutlers, hairdressers or jewellers at prices that range from the humble crown up to £10. The handsome Gillette outfits for ladies include the "Milady Décolletée Model," which contains a 14-carat gold safety razor and blade-box, with twelve blades in a neat French ivory case—very moderately priced at 25*s*. The Gillette Safety Razor, Ltd., 184, Great Portland Street, W.1, have a well-illustrated booklet showing the various models.

MAGIC NOTES

DAINTIES FOR CHRISTMAS

A Christmas Plum Pudding
A Christmas Cake
Brandy Sauce
Almond Paste
And a Chicken Mayonnaise

A Christmas Plum Pudding

One pound of stoned raisins, 1 lb. of currants, 1 lb. of finely chopped beef suet, 1 lb. of breadcrumbs, ½ lb. of flour, 1 lb. of moist sugar, one nutmeg, grated, half teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon, one teaspoonful of salt, ¼ lb. of chopped candied peel, four eggs, one glass of brandy or rum. Mix the spices and salt in the dry flour, add the breadcrumbs and sugar, then the suet and fruit, and, lastly, the brandy or rum and the four eggs well beaten. Stir well until thoroughly mixed, then put in a well-greased mould and boil for twelve hours. This pudding will then only require two hours steaming on Christmas Day.

A Christmas Cake (Average Cost without icing 6s.)

Required: 1 lb. of flour, ¾ lb. of butter, ¾ lb. of castor sugar, ¾ lb. of currrants, ¾ lb. of sultanas, ¾ lb. of cherries, ¾ lb. of mixed peel, 6 ozs. of sweet almonds, eight eggs, 1 oz. of mixed spice, the rind of two lemons and two oranges, half gill of caramel (if wanted very dark,) half teaspoonful of salt, quarter pint of brandy or home-made wine. Line the cake tin with two or three layers of greased paper. Put the butter and sugar into a basin. and beat them till smooth with a wooden spoon. Beat in the eggs separately one by one, very thoroughly. Chop the peel coarsely, and halve the cherries, shell the almonds and shred them finely. Clean and stalk the currants and sultanas. Mix all the fruit together on a plate with the grated orange and lemon rinds and spice. Mix the flour and salt. Stir these lightly into the eggs, butter and sugar. Add the mixed fruits. If you wish to darken the cake, add the caramel to the brandy, and stir them into the other ingredients. Put the mixture into the tin. Stand the tin on a layer of sand or salt in a baking-sheet. Bake it very carefully for three and a half to four hours. Turn out of the tin, peel off the paper, allow it to cool, then wrap it in grease-proof paper, and put it in a dry, cool place till it is needed for Christmas Day. These rich cakes greatly improve by keeping for some weeks. They may be covered with almond icing. (Recipe in next week's number.)

Brandy Sauce

Beat ½ lb. of fresh butter to a cream, add 2½ozs. of castor sugar, a glass of sherry, and a small glass of brandy. Mix well together. The brandy must be added a little at a time.

Almond Paste

Two ounces of fresh butter beaten to a cream, add 1 oz. of castor sugar, and sixteen bitter almonds blanched and pounded until very fine; beat these together, then stir in rather more than half a wineglassful of brandy. Beat well together near the fire until it looks like clotted cream, but on no account cook it. This amount only makes a small quantity, so if wanted for ten or a dozen persons the writer advises doubling the amounts. This is an old family recipe, and very delicious.

Mayonnaise of Chicken in Shells

Put a teaspoonful of mayonnaise into some china shells and fill up each with finely minced chicken, a little minced ham, shred lettuce, strips of hard-boiled egg, and a stoned olive. Cover it all thoroughly with mayonnaise and sprinkle with minced parsley and sieved yolk of egg. Any remains of meat can be served in this way, a chopped-up anchovy being a tasty addition. EMILIA

The John Haig Famous Hostelry Series

Ye Olde Dr. Butler's Head, Off Coleman St., City of London.

The Doctor's Sudden Cure

IT is related of Dr. Butler, Court Physician to James I., that on one occasion when he was living in a house on the bank of the Thames, a patient suffering from ague was brought over in a boat to see him.

The doctor quickly examined his patient from the window, diagnosed the trouble, then sent down to him two stalwart serving men, who suddenly plunged the astonished man into the water. So unexpected a shock and so great a fright as this immersion completely and permanently cured the man of his ailment.

In addition to his medical duties, Dr. Butler found time to invent a particular brew of ale known by his name, which immediately became very popular. He established a number of taverns for its sale, to all of which were given the name of "Dr. Butler's Head." After the doctor's death, about 1618, the demand for his ale gradually died, and as a result the taverns have all disappeared with the exception of the one portrayed by our artist, which, established originally in 1616, is to-day a popular city luncheon house.

It is interesting, but not surprising, to note that the disappearance of Dr. Butler's ale coincides with the first appearance of the original John Haig Whisky, which, from the time of its introduction nearly three hundred years ago, has never failed to preserve for itself a pre-eminence and popularity unrivalled.
